Raids on Villages in County Longford Follow the Killing of Several Officials.

DEATH THREATENED
FOR CORRESPONDENT

If He Sends Dispatches Without Allowing Them to Be Censored—Disorder Is Strangling Railroads of Ireland.

Granard, Ireland, November 6.—(By the Associated Press.)—The sacking of this town Wednesday night by uniformed men ranks with the recent raids at Balbriggan, Malahide and Tullamore, according to the Associated Press by eye-witnesses today. The damage, which was carried out systematically, is said to have been under the direction of an officer, and was part of an extensive raid across County Longford, after the murder of several policemen in the district Sunday and Monday.

Eleven lorries, which made up the raiding party, stopped first at the village of Edgeworthstown, where several houses were searched and a man riding a bicycle was shot. Next Granard was visited and 13 buildings were burned here. The last village raided was Ballinalee, adjacent to Granard, where the raiders ran into an ambush of volunteers, losing three men killed and five wounded. They then were forced to retire.

Put at Strategic Positions.

The party entered Granard at 11:30 o'clock Wednesday night and proceeded immediately to the police barracks. All but two of the lorries were placed at strategic positions to prevent a surprise attack. Operating in two parties the men went methodically about the work of destruction.

At a town of Longford, the correspondent was told, eight soldiers accompanied the police, but did not take part in the reprisals.

A former soldier, one of the handful of the population remaining in the town after the shooting and killing of District Inspector of Police Kelleher on Sunday night, in his account of Wednesday night's raid on Granard, said the police were commanded by a tall officer in khaki uniform and riding breeches.

Music After Burning.

The burning parties walked back after their visit to the barracks, carrying rifles and two Lewis guns; some of them were playing melodeons and mouth organs," he declared. "Machines guns were placed at a corner of the county hall. Then with them the raiders fired several hundred shots, apparently to frighten the citizens. All of them seemed perfectly sober. There were no shots fired after the first fusillade. No explosives were used, the buildings which were burned being touched with petrol."

Inspector Kelleher, whose killing is supposed to have been the cause of the raid, is said to have been accused as one of the men responsible for the death of Lord Mayor MacCurtain, of Cork. Kelleher was standing at the bar of the Grand hotel Sunday evening when masked men entered and shot him dead. They made their escape.

TOWN OF TRALEE STARVATION.

London, November 6.—The town of Tralee, Ireland, is fast approaching starvation in consequence of the recent police order forbidding the carrying on of business until 10 missing policemen are returned by the townpeople, says a dispatch to The London Times from Dublin.

Trade is paralyzed, the banks and bakeries are being closed, and the people are becoming desperate. An additional military order forbids the holding of fairs and markets or assemblies of any kind within a three-mile limit.

The dispatch adds that a deputation today called on the military commander, who replied that as martial law did not exist he could not usurp the civil power.

THREAT TO KILL CORRESPONDENT.

London, November 6.—The correspondent of the Central News at Tralee, Ireland, reports he has received written warning that he will be shot if he transmits any dispatches without first submitting them to the police.

Sir Hamar Greenwood, chief secretary for Ireland, was questioned in the house of commons last Wednesday regarding a story from a staff correspondent in Ireland of The Daily News to the effect that the correspondent's life was in danger from "Black and Tans" because he wrote the "truth."

The government, said Sir Hamar, had not been informed of the threat, but he had instructed the district inspector at Tralee, where the threat was alleged, to have been made, to give protection to all newspaper correspondents.

Church Is Standing, by Rev. Mr. Spracklin and Raises $300,000 for His Defense.

Windsor, Ont., November 6.—Whether Rev. J. O. L. Spracklin, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church of Sandwich, and a leader of prohibition enforcement agents along the border must stand trial for the slaying early today of Beverly Trumble, an inn proprietor, was to be determined by the result of a coroner's inquest. Crown Attorney Todd announced he would take no action against the minister-license inspector until the coroner's jury had rendered a verdict.

In a statement to police officers Spracklin claimed he shot Trumble in self-defense and his version of the raid on Trumble's place was corroborated by three other officers who were with him. Trumble's widow and several friends, who were called to testify, however, declared Trumble was unarmed. Local police who made an investigation, said they had been unable to find the pistol. Spracklin claims the man had drawn upon him.

Feeling ran high throughout the border cities tonight and the police said they had heard open threats to "shoot Spracklin on sight." The minister was being detained at police headquarters for his own safety. Provincial officers took extraordinary precautions to prevent disorders at the inquest, which attracted a large crowd.

During the day members of Spracklin's congregation, raised $10,000 for his defense, should no charges be brought against him and pledged $300,000 for his bond. They declared the church was prepared to "go the limit" in providing funds and other assistance their pastor might require.

Found in Severe Pain.

Dr. Orr was the physician called to attend Shepard and he said he found him in bed suffering from severe abdominal pains and that he had been vomited some. He said he was in extreme pain and his abdomen was hard and rigid.

Members of the coroner's jury who are investigating the case are N. C. Nell, E. T. McMillan, W. M. Wright, A. L. Selfair, W. H. Cartwright and J. L. Brown.

Shepard, a wealthy peach grower, was married December 21, 1918, to Mrs. Pauline Hopson, of Abbeville, Ga. She was a native of South Carolina. Six weeks following the death of Shepard, Mrs. Shepard was married to Dr. F. E. Elcock of Jacksonville, Fla., and the couple are now residents of the Florida metropolis.

Shepard's widow took over the estate immediately after her husband's death, believing that he died intestate. However, it developed ten days ago, an anonymous letter was received by Mrs. George N. Cranfill, sister of Shepard, in which there was a will bearing the signature of Shepard and signed thirteen days before his death, in which Mrs. Shepard was left $10,000 in cash, and an annuity of $100 a month for the balance of her life. Shepard's estate is said to have been worth more than $200,000.

Big Sensation Caused.

A large crowd attended the hearing this afternoon and drank in every word uttered by the witnesses. It is the biggest sensation Houston county has had in years.

Shepard's vital organs were removed at the autopsy and forwarded to the state chemist in Atlanta, who will make an examination immediately to ascertain the cause of the death of the late capitalist. The physicians who had charge of the disinterment of the body, said it was in good condition and was recognized by those who were present with Shepard.

"For this part of the work," said the chairman, "we were depending on the membership of the Rotary club, the Kiwanis club, the Advertising club, the Civilian club and the Atlanta Association of Life Insurers, for each organization had indicated the roll call and pledged its wholehearted support. A combined membership of 1,000 is represented by the organizations named, men who are always foremost in civic endeavor. We felt that we could enlist at least 250 workers of the total, and with that in view sent out letter to the members of all five organizations, asking for a few hours of their time. So far, we have received less than fifty replies, but we hope to find a better response by Monday morning."

The booth division, under the direction of Miss Rosalee Howell, has announced itself ready to begin work, an efficient little army of women having already been lined up to take charge of the booths which will be located in the foyer of every hotel and public buildings of the downtown section, as well as in the department stores, to sell memberships to those who have not been reached by the canvass of homes and offices.

Large Number of Women.

Miss Howell Saturday announced a large list of active women civic workers of Atlanta, who have already accepted the chairmanship of booths. The specific assignment of booths to chairmen and the workers at each booth will be announced later, but the following women have already accepted the responsibility of chairmanships:

Mrs. Stacy Ernest Hill, Mrs. Samuel C. Dobbs, Miss Dorothy Haverly, Mrs. Mabel C. H. Haverly, Mrs. C. H. Wright, Mrs. J. M. White, Mrs. Norman Sharpe, Mrs. W. G. Wealthy Houston County Peach Grower's Death Investigated at Direction of Coroner's Jury.

SENSATION CAUSED IN MIDDLE GEORGIA

Great Crowds Attend the Hearing That Orders Inquest and Autopsy—Arrests Are Expected.

Macon, Ga., November 6.—(Special)—The body of Fred Shepard, wealthy Houston county peach grower, who died under mysterious circumstances June 2, of this year, was exhumed tonight in the cemetery near Fort Valley, and an autopsy was begun at once by two physicians, working under direction of Coroner A. B. Schilling and a jury empaneled by Coroner Schilling to conduct an inquest. The results shown by the autopsy will determine future developments.

Only two witnesses were examined up to the time the jury went to the cemetery to supervise exhuming the body. They were Dr. W. L. Orr and Dr. M. S. Brown. The latter, in his testimony, declared that the symptoms of Shepard's illness, which resulted in his death, could not have been caused by any disease known to medical science. These symptoms indicated poison, which might have been arsenic or mercury.

Reported That Myron T. Herrick Is Intermediary in Negotiations Between President-Elect and the French Government.

Three Defeated Republicans Have Now Given Notice They Will Fight for Congress Seats.

Alleged That France Has Asked Harding to Send Personal Representative to Forthcoming Meeting of Assembly of League.

Washington, November 6.—State department and white-house officials refused today to discuss reports from Paris published in this country that Myron T. Herrick, formerly American ambassador to France, had been chosen as an intermediary in negotiations with President-elect Harding regarding his proposal for an assembly of nations.

The legal notice, bearing his signature and filed at the governor's office, had been released for publication, he said. "I have nothing whatever to say."

The defeated republican candidate was pressed for an answer to the question: "Did you file the contest papers at the governor's office?" but he would neither give an affirmative nor a negative reply.

The legal notice at the capital charges that "Illegality and irregularities" were allowed by the managers of voting places in the fifth congressional district, but no specific incident was mentioned. It was inferred that Mr. Martin would submit evidence to substantiate his charges at the proper time and place.

Officials Are Silent.

Officials at the state department would not say whether the French government formally had communicated to the present administration its desires to discuss this or other matters with the new administration in advance of its actual inauguration, nor would they say whether there was precedent for such a request.

They also refused to say whether they had information that Mr. Harding was to be asked by the French government delegation to send a personal representative to the forthcoming meeting of the assembly of nations.

It was stated some time ago that the United States would not be represented at this meeting, even unofficially, but Secretary Colby refused today to say whether an unofficial observer for the American government would attend the session.

The law requires that petitions for contest must be filed with the clerk of the house, representing the state in which the election was held, and then a special committee from the house is appointed to hear the contest.

Body Is Exhumed.

Immediately after the verdict of the coroner's jury ordering that an autopsy be performed, was announced, a gang of negroes was sent to Oakland cemetery to excavate the steel casket.

Shepard was 50 years of age and was connected with leading families of middle Georgia. He was taken sick in Marshallville with severe pains in the region of the abdomen. Three days before death Dr. G. W. Nelson, of Marshallville, prescribed for him, after which Shepard went to Perry, where he was the guest of his wife's relatives. The suffering was so acute that Dr. Brown, of Fort Valley, was called in.

Shepard was removed to Williams' sanatorium, where he died after an operation had been performed. Dr. Brown testified that he could not

GIVEN BIG VOTES

Official Complete Returns From 146 Counties Show That All Constitutional Changes Have Been Ratified.

With official complete returns from 146 of the 155 Georgia counties now received, the creation of five new counties in the passage of all other amendments on the official ballot of the general election Tuesday are assured, according to figures tabulated exclusively Saturday evening by The Constitution.

Brantley, Lanier, Long and Seminole are the new counties created by the voters last week, with the last-named receiving 57,532, the largest vote cast in returns received in until last night, and Lamar running a close second, with 54,590. Brantley, Lanier and Long follow in order.

The amendment providing for the levy of a local tax by counties and municipalities of this state in support of public schools, received 55,755 votes, the highest number cast for any of the amendments, according to available returns. A total of 17,888 votes against the amendment had been recorded. Seminole ranks next to the tax measure in the highest number of votes received.

M. L. Brittain Pleased.

Superintendent of State Schools M. L. Brittain stated Saturday he was much pleased over the passage of the local tax amendment, and declared it would mean much to the progress of education in Georgia in providing funds for many necessary improvements.

The vote in favor of the amendment of paragraph 1 of article 8, section 6 of the constitution, which strikes the words: "May from time to time make such donations there to as the condition of the treasury authorize; and the general assembly may also from time to time make such appropriations of money as the condition of the treasury authorizes on any college or university, not exceeding one in number, now established or hereafter to be established in this state for the education of persons of color," was 42,615.

Twenty-seven thousand, five hundred and twenty votes are shown against this measure, which provides for financial aid to agricultural and industrial schools for colored people.

VOTE FOR WEST POINT.

For the amendment allowing the city of West Point to increase its bonded indebtedness for flood protection, 54,864 votes have so far been tabulated, with 13,853 negative. The corner lot was purchased by Mr. Byrd from George Barrett, the house next to the corner was formerly the property of Mrs. J. M. formation of the corporation was not for the purpose of controlling the cotton situation or aiding the holding of cotton for higher prices, but rather for the purpose of financing the sales of cotton and other products to foreign countries and provide the banking facilities for this class of business.

Under the Edge Law.

The corporation is to be organized under the provisions of the Edge law, according to plans, and as soon as organization can be performed, will give attention to the needs of the country for foreign big deals with foreign markets in its staple products—cotton, sugar, rice and lumber. The corporation, according to plans, will furnish the machinery, equipment which is associated in the organization may merge their resources in placing the farms on the most profitable markets in the world. New Orleans has made a bid for headquarters of the corporation.

Only one organization such as is planned exists in the country. It is located in New York with a $5,000,000 capital shortly after the Edge law made such an association possible. The New York concern is known as the First Federal Foreign Banking Association and the one to be formed here probably will be known as the Second Federal Foreign Banking Association. It was said.

"In view of the fact that the soviet government has not been recognized by any power, it is unnecessary to point out that the Japanese government has been compelled to recognize any private agreement and is not prepared to assent to any act or measure which infringes upon Japan's treaty rights with relation to Russia, after her vital assets, arising from geographic or other considerations."

New York, November 6.—The Americanization campaign will be inaugurated by the Knights of Pythias at a public meeting in Carnegie hall on November 15; under the auspices of the grand lodge of New York state.

Palmer Campfield, grand chancellor, in making this announcement today, said: "The post-war readjustment will better be solved if the citizens of this country have a clearer conception of the ideals and duties of true Americanism."

"To this end," he added, "the Knights of Pythias will start an intensive campaign during the month of November to bring the order in this country to promulgate American principles and ideals and to combat the unwise and dissatisfaction which prevails among those who do not fully understand the principles upon which this republic is founded."

Supreme and grand lodge officials, from every part of the country, was stated, will attend the meeting.

SILVERS' BIG STORE TO OPEN SATURDAY

New and Handsome Five-and-Ten-Cent House on Whitehall to Be Throw Open for Inspection Only on Friday.

With more than 40,000 square feet of floor space crowded to its utmost with a line of attractive goods, Silvers' Five-and-Ten-Cent Store, Atlanta's newest establishment of this kind, will open its doors to the public for its first sales on next Saturday morning at 9 o'clock.

The new store, the largest in the city, however, will give the public a view at their tremendous stocks on Friday, the 12th, the day before the sale opening. At this inspection on Friday, sales will be made, and the public is cordially invited to make a visit to the store, the opening hours being from 3:30 to 5:30 o'clock in the evening. Music for the occasion will be furnished by Kneisel's orchestra.

The new store is located at 85-87 Whitehall street, running through to Broad street, with Nos. 70-72 on the latter street. The building now occupied by Silvers' store was formerly a state bank, but after months of remodeling by carpenters and painters, and with every piece of furnishing and every shelf, brand-new and brightly polished, and with red and beautiful lights shedding a soft glow throughout the interior.

store is one of the prettiest of its kind ever opened in the entire south. Four big floors are filled-there of them as salesrooms, while the top floor is used as a stock-room.

The front on Whitehall street has been most attractively arranged, and a dozen large windows display windows, handspun, cross-panes, and thousands of articles, drew all passers-by on Saturday, and many were the lookers-on who expressed a desire to purchase some of the purchase at the prices quoted on articles in the windows. These windows will serve to make people more anxious for a shopping visit to the store when its doors are opened for business on the 13th.

Inside scores of clerks are busy arranging the stock on tables and shelves, and placing the tick-sets. Before Friday the entire corps of salesladies will be on hand—some 200 or more—and everything will be in readiness for the opening.

All Atlantans, especially young men ambitious for success in business, are invited to the opening of the Atlanta Y. M. C. A.'s night school for men at the association building, 11 Luckie street, Monday night.

The opening will be made by a number of short, but interesting speeches by prominent Atlantans on the advantages of practical education in life. The speakers will be Albert S. Adams, past international president of Rotary.

The subject to be taught in the night classes, which will be held in the school building in each club, are business English, business arithmetic, commercial law, Spanish, penmanship and correspondence. Any man states that the occurrence was entirely accidental, and is sure that young McCuen was in no way to blame.

The faculty for the night school includes well-known instructors as Professor J. L. Comporator, formerly with Agnes Scott; Professor William H. Hodges, mathematician; Professor G. W. Gasque, English; Professor G. A. Hawkins, formerly head of the Chattanooga Business college; Professor Floyd Field, of Georgia Tech; R. A. Tracy, state manager of the Phoenix Life Insurance company; W. E. Newill, treasurer of the Campbell Coal company, and Professor C. A. Hawkins, instructor in commercial law.

FULTON'S $40,000 AD GOAL IN SIGHT

City Council Is Expected to Give $5,000 to Movement and County Commissioners $10,000.

After three days of intensive work by members of the Atlanta Advertising club, the goal of $40,000 set for Fulton county in the Ad- vertise Georgia movement is now in sight, and should be attained with two or three days' work this week, according to Harry Goo Part, chairman of the county.

Additional interest is being taken in the movement within the past few days on account of the active agitation which has been prevalent wth regard to the proposed world's exposition for Atlanta in 1925. Those interested in the world's fair and those who have been working for the big $300,000 advertising campaign believe that the two movements have found an interdependence which should work for great good to the city, state and southeast.

Advantages Are Shown.
In this issue of The Constitution will be found an article by H. G. Hastings, president of the South- western Fair association, in which the manifold advantages which would accrue to the section from such an event are set forth, as well as the extremely favorable advantages Atlanta possesses for the accommodation of an exposition of international scope.

"There is no doubt of the value of such a movement," said Mr. Goodhart Saturday, "and the work which the advertising campaign for the state will do is precisely in line with preparations which will be finally made for the event."

At the last Thursday luncheon of the Atlanta Advertising club, which was a specially called meeting to organize for aid of the Ad- vertise Georgia movement, committees were named and captains appointed for solicitation of subscriptions from all the business concerns and individuals of the city and the workers' report success in almost every in- stance.

Council Expected to Aid.

In addition to the subscription list, which is now $10,000 which was in hand before the start of the campaign Thursday, the general council of Atlanta is considering an appropriation of $5,000 to the movement, and the county commissioners are expected to act favorably on a resolution to donate $10,000 to the fund.

More than $100,000 has been raised throughout the state already, and only 27 of the 155 counties in Georgia have made their final reports, said Frank Hammons, executive secretary of the enterprise, Saturday. Every county has taken hold of the proposition with a determination to succeed. It is difficult, no doubt about the success of the project is being entered.

One point in the campaign's makeup, it has been pointed out, is that it is the first campaign inaugurated in the state which has had for its object the betterment of the state as a whole, without pre-ference or partiality for any city or section.

Mrs. White is the first woman in Georgia who is known to have voted and had her ballot counted under the new suffrage amendment.

DECATUR INVADED BY AUTO THIEVES; TWO CARS TAKEN

Automobile thieves invaded De- catur Friday and left with a five- passenger automobile which is said to have been stolen from in front of the home of its owner, C. H. Morris, 58 Frederick street. W. H. Richards, 111 Belmont street, was the victim of the invasion and lost a five-passenger automobile from in front of his residence.

Will Name Successor To Miss Annie Roddy
At Pryor St. School

Interest in the regular meeting of the board of education Monday afternoon will revolve chiefly around the election of a principal at the Pryor Street school to succeed Mrs. Mary Roddy, principal of the school, whose death occurred last Sunday.

Mr. W. F. Dykes will make the nomination and F. Dykes will elect. Four candidates have been mentioned for the position, though it is said that patrons of the school are preparing a petition which will be presented to Mr. Dykes asking him to nominate Miss Martha Haygood, now principal of "The Salvation of Uncle Sam" in Wesleyan Methodist church at 8 a. m. and at the Tabernacle Baptist church at 7:30 p. m.

Miss Haygood has been known the country over for her clever and unique humor, and for the power of her utterance. He and Sam posed used to be the best known comedians in the latter, and to their efforts is largely credited the fact that the south went dry before prohibition was established in the middle of the east. The meeting will be held under the auspices of the National Re- form association.

ONLY 500 APPLES SENT BY SOUTHERN RURALIST

It was 500 apples, sent to advertisers and advertising agencies—not 300,000, as one paper has described—that the Southern Ruralist used as expression of Halloween greetings, according to S. S. Howle, managing editor of the paper, of the well-known farm publication, who asks that The Constitution make correction of the misstatement.

Having explained that it was advertisers and advertising agencies, not the long list of subscribers who received the Southern Georgia pippins, Mr. Howle said:

"When we tell you that each of the 500 apples sent out by us, in the 1920 edition, cost us 41 1/2 cents and postage, cost us 41 1/2 cents, you can readily understand that we could hardly afford to be so generous as to send out of our 350,110 subscribers one of the Southern pippins. The expense would have been $175,055 and it would have taken 6,252 bushels of apples the size we sent out."

REGENSTEIN FUNERAL WILL BE HELD TODAY

Funeral services for Mrs. Mayer Regenstein, wife of Mayer Regenstein, president of the Regenstein Millinery company, on Whitehall street, whose death occurred Friday night, will be held this afternoon at 3 o'clock. Burial will be at West View cemetery.

Mrs. Regenstein was survived by her husband, her father, C. E. Regenstein, of Chappelle, S. C.; one sister, Mrs. P. M. Stephens, of Charlotte, N. C.; two brothers, T. J. Moore, of Long View, Texas, and Worth Moore, of Atlanta.

KEENE'S FUNERAL WILL BE HELD IN COLUMBUS

The body of George M. Keene, 28 years of age, who killed himself early Saturday morning in a room of a local hotel, will be sent Sunday to Columbus, Ga., for funeral services.

Mr. Keene was a valued and responsible employee of the Arthur T. Tufts Company, and, according to officials of the company, was a man of good character. Despondency, his associates say, caused him to take his life.

Surviving Mr. Keene are his mother, Mrs. Alice J. Keene, of Atlanta; three brothers, F. S. Keene, of Winsboro, S. C.; F. S. Keene, of Atlanta, and J. C. Keene, of Denver, Col.

ST. MIHIEL HERO, COL. DAN SMITH, TO LECTURE HERE

One day in 1918, at the close of the St. Mihiel drive, a small force who had been in the front lines, saw a battalion, battered and worn, with its ranks depleted beyond recognition, making its way to the rear after having written a record of glory for the Ninety-second division. It was the First Battalion of the 55th Infantry, and the correspondents cabled to America the vividly heroic story of "The Battalions of Death." Col. Dan Morgan Smith commanded that historic unit through its terrific fighting at St. Mihiel, Verdun, and the Argonne. This he will speak at St. Mark's Methodist Church at 11 o'clock.

Colonel Smith is touring the country under auspices of the Anti-Saloon league, and will speak in every Georgia city. 6,000 ink signatures have been collected to the effect that the liquor interests are like a defeated army yet has great power and is preparing for a monstrous counter-attack. Col. Dan Morgan Smith commanded that historic unit with plotting to revise the Volstead act so as to permit individual states to establish the percentage restriction of their own.

Colonel Smith was reared in Florida, practiced law in Savannah, entered the Spanish-American war, and was promoted to lieutenant colonel. At the time of the armistice Colonel Smith had just been placed in command of the first American machine gun regiment ever organized.

Colonel Smith was promoted to lieutenant colonel on the field. In a press comment it is mentioned in Atlanta that Col. Dan Morgan Smith gives remarkably vivid pictures of life on the battlefield and in the trenches, and his tribute to the heroic work of his officers and men in battle ordeals are no less eloquent.

BADGES ARE HERE FOR THE SPECIAL POLICE OFFICERS

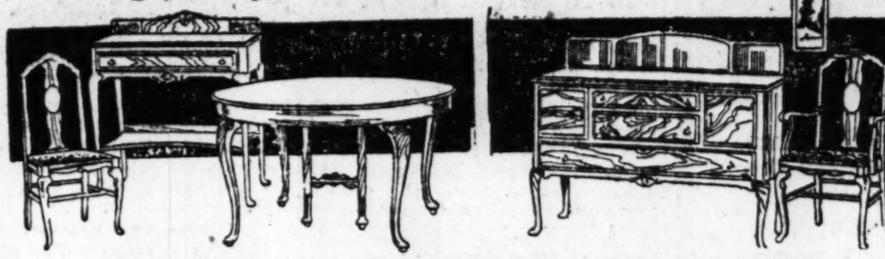

Approximately 100 citizen officers, who several weeks ago were sworn in at police headquarters to assist the regular members of the force in the enforcement of traffic laws and other ordinances, will be given badges at Chief of Police Beavers' office as they call for them, according to announcement from headquarters. The badges were received Saturday.

In order that the special officers may assist in the work of rounding up speeders and other law breakers, it is requested that the special officers call at the office of Chief of Police Beavers as early as possible.

Anita Stewart's next picture will be called "The Tornado." Ewin Carew will direct.

NORTH END CITIZENS TO RAP GAS AND CARS

Mass Meeting of Protest to Be Held Monday at Baptist Church.

Citizens living in the north end of the ninth ward, known as the Highland-Pine de Leon section, have called a meeting of citizens for Monday evening. No meeting at 7:45 o'clock at the Druid Hills Club, Highland and Ponce de Leon, is to protest against the service they claim they are getting on gas and street car accommodations. Thousands of handbills headed "Poor Gas—Awful Street Car Service," have been circulated in the community, and the meeting promises to be largely attended. "It is hard to see if something cannot be done to remedy the two matters mentioned in the circular," said a citizen of that section who is interested in the call. "There are other matters in that section of the city that need attention—such matters as street improvements, school needs, fire alarm boxes, lights, delineation, and others which will also be discussed at the meeting Monday night. We are not going into a meeting to antagonize anybody or any company. We are going to try to realize that if you don't make a 'kick' and stand up for your rights you get mighty little these days. We expect to meet together in a spirit of co-operation and helpfulness, air our grievances (and we have many) and then to try to suggest some remedies for them. Then the resolution will be passed that the boy in the old reader, we will use stones instead of tufts of grass."

"All citizens in that section, including women, are invited only to attend, but invited to attend. The meeting has been called by about a dozen citizens who believe that such a gathering will be helpful to us."

Look at your own parlor. In your imagination, substitute a little Grand piano in place of the Upright. What a transformation of the graceful, esthetic lines of the new instrument effect. ## Tech High Boys Take Pride In Newspaper All Their Own

Students at work setting type and printing their newspaper at Tech High school, every part of the work, from printer's devil to editor-in-chief duties, being done by the pupils.

BY HOWARD T. JONES.
From "printer's devil" to editor-in-chief, every person who touches The Rainbow, weekly paper of Tech High school, is a student. The boys write the copy, set the type, man the presses and handle the circulation. It is said to be the only high school paper published entirely by the student body.

On the third floor of Tech High annex are two rooms devoted to printing, which is offered as a standard elective course in the school's department of manual training. Professor W. A. Sutton, principal, says it "is the best English course that has ever been offered."

Professor Sutton explained that whenever peculiarly bad English student is found a few weeks in the composition room, the boy is asked to make mistakes in the way of punctuation, spelling and sentence construction.

Mr. Sutton, to the Tech High Press is interested. In the composing room are youngsters bending intently over the big type cases, setting up galley of type with the dispatch of professionals. At present there are four presses operated by students. In yet another department the boys may be found doing simple binding.

Good Work Done.
The work turned out by this department of the school is the most improved in the country. E. L. Sutton and B. L. Coles, is not limited to weekly publications and football posters. Last year the boys saved the school $1,000.00 in the cost of education by printing pamphlets, announcements, report cards, letter-heads and many necessary forms. Every report card and every copy of rules and regulations in the Atlanta high schools is printed by Tech High.

Some conception of the financial saving made possible by the Tech High Press may be had from the figure on The Weekly Rainbow. Under present conditions an average weekly issue of 1,200 copies costs $574 a year. Should the work be doubled, it would amount to about $400 for a single issue.

The Rainbow is an excellent school paper, made up of a judicious apportionment of school news, humor and timely editorials. Its columns maintain the spirit and interests of the institution which they represent.

Plan New Venture.

Within a few weeks the boys will place upon the market their first literary venture in the form of a volume of short stories, written and published by the students of Tech High.

Tech High Tales by Tech High Boys.

Mr. Sutton, for many years a professional printer, has a special interest in his own for the future of this department. He hopes to persuade all local printing establishments and their apprentices to print some in order to assist the profession by an economy in the time of teaching.

At present the course as offered requires three years for completion, but the primary object is not to turn out printers, but to broaden the students by giving them an intimate knowledge of another field.

Professor Sutton states the major premise of Tech High is "anything which teaches a boy how to do something well is just so much education."

JUNIOR MECHANICS TO HEAR MAYOR KEY

Mayor James L. Key will address members of the Junior Order of American Mechanics at 3 p. m. Sunday at the Junior Order hall, 28 1-2 Capitol avenue. Every member in Fulton and surrounding counties is invited to attend.

Baptist Missionary Workers to Convene In Augusta Next Week

The executive board of the Georgia Baptist Woman's Missionary Union held the last meeting of the fiscal year November 2. A number of board members from the state at large perfected plans relating to the annual meeting in Augusta.

The First Baptist church, Augusta, will be hostess for the Georgia Baptist women in their annual convention November 16, 17 and 18. It is the first time in its history that the delegates will bear their own expenses.

It will be the completion of the first year of the $75,000 campaign.

The financial record of the year is gratifying, $425,728.17 being reported given by the women through the executive board, the amount given $15,000. This difference is accounted for by the fact that many societies sent their gifts through their church treasurers undesignated. Therefore it went to the general mission fund and the W. M. U. could not be given credit for it.

The report comes from Augusta that the number of delegates being sent in is nearing the 300-mark and two weeks remain before the convention assembles. All delegates and visitors are urged to pay for their tickets as soon as possible when buying their tickets, as the two-thirds rate will not be granted unless the number reaches 400.

Mrs. Maud R. McLure, of the W. M. U. training school, Louisville, will address the convention Wednesday night, leading the consecration service. Dr. W. J. McGlothlin, president of Furman university; Miss Christine Garnett, from Miss Clark, Keith of Africa and Mrs. R. F. Flanagan, corresponding secretary of South Carolina. Two addresses of special interest will be that of the president's, Mrs. W. N. Neal, and that of Mrs. Kate C. Wakefield, which will feature the program the first evening. An honored visitor at the convention will be Mrs. J. C. Jackson, corresponding secretary of the B. W. M. U. of Arkansas.

One of the most important matters to be acted upon is the removal of the Baptist church, M. S. Headquarters of the south from Baltimore to a city nearer the center of southern Baptist territory. This question was discussed at the convention in Washington last May and was referred back to the states in their annual sessions for further consideration.

All the reasons for and against the move will be discussed at the Southern Baptist convention, which meets in Chattanooga in May.

Mrs. Kate C. Wakefield, corresponding secretary of the B. W. M. U. of Georgia's Missionary Union of Georgia, who has been making a tour of mission fields in China and Japan, has returned to her home in Atlanta and to her duties as a teacher.

Mrs. Wakefield sailed August 17 on the missionary ship, Empress of Japan, which carried nearly 200 missionaries to foreign lands and has spent the intervening time working with missionaries on their fields of labor.

She also attended the world's Sunday school convention at Tokio. Her friends and fellow workers in Georgia are happy to welcome her home.

BISHOP CLAIR TO SPEAK

Public Invited to Gammon Theological Seminary.

The public is invited to the traditional day exercises of Gammon Theological Seminary, to be held in the refectory on the Gammon campus, Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Dr. Matthew S. Clair, recently elected a bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church, and appointed to Africa, will be the speaker. After his address the public will be invited to be inducted into the duties and privileges of the seminary.

The year is opening auspiciously with more than 1,000 students enrolled in the regular and special courses.

ICE MEN TO CONVENE

Association Members to Discuss Modern Methods.

The annual convention of the Georgia Ice Manufacturers' association will be held in Atlanta November 10 and 11. C. H. Dance, of Toccoa, Ga., president of the association, will preside. Modern methods of manufacture and distribution of the frozen product are the principal subjects of the program. Ice manufacturers from every part of Georgia will be in attendance, and some from adjoining states.

FREE ORGAN RECITAL PROGRAM FOR SUNDAY

DEATH PENALTIES URGED BY BOYKIN

Solicitor Declares That This Is the Only Way to Put End to Epidemic of Fatal Auto Accidents.

Urging the death penalty for drivers of cars who show disregard for human life and traffic regulations and as a consequence kill innocent pedestrians, Solicitor John A. Boykin, Saturday, stated that until the legislature finds these drivers guilty of murder under this epidemic will continue.

Solicitor Boykin's statement followed deaths Friday of Miss Alberta Patterson and C. L. Hood, which were caused by automobiles. Although eight deaths have resulted from such accidents within the past two months, every week, stated Mr. Boykin, "we are another automobile homicide."

"A pedestrian is not safe on the streets of Atlanta with the reckless driving that is done in this city. If a driver violates the traffic laws, is speeding or is intoxicated, and as a consequence of this violation death results, I do not see why he is not guilty of murder."

"If juries cannot bring themselves to find a verdict of murder, and therefore have to find involuntary manslaughter, I think it is the duty of the citizens of this community to get together and ask our representatives in the legislature to have the present law amended so that the penalty for involuntary manslaughter will be as far-reaching as the law governing assault with intent to murder, in which a jury may give from one to twenty years. For in voluntary manslaughter, the law provides that the jury may fix the sentence from one to three years."

Solicitor E. A. Stephens was equally as strong in his appeal for the death penalty or for an immediate change in the indeterminate sentence laws of the state.

GEORGIA PRODUCTS DINNER IS PLANNED AS FEATURE EVENT

The sixth annual Georgia products dinner, conducted by the Joseph Habersham chapter, will take place Tuesday, November 23, at 1 o'clock.

Mr. George Lewis Pratt will be hostess of the dinner, conducted by the chairman of the committee. Among those who have received invitations are Mrs. Scott, Wesleyan seminary, Wesleyan Lucy Cobb, Georgia Military Academy, City federation, Atlanta Country Club, Mrs. Billie Sunday, Mrs. Brinkley, Neighborhood ladies, Old Guard, Junior League, League Women Voters, Automobile association, Hotel Rotarians, Ad men and Kiwanis.

There will be college songs and the Georgia Military Academy band, bringing 48 pieces. Royal Lee Boys band of 33 pieces, who will make their debut on this occasion.

DRAINAGE EXPERTS MEET WEDNESDAY

National Congress, Which Convenes Here for Ninth Session, Will Bring Thousands of Visitors.

With some of the greatest authorities on drainage in the country in the program to deliver papers, every indication points to a most successful convention when the National Drainage congress meets for its ninth annual session in Atlanta next Wednesday. The convention will last three days, each day crowded with a full program of speaking and entertainments.

The business sessions will be held at the City Auditorium, where space is being leased to various manufacturers of drainage and engineering machinery, for exhibits of their products. Manufacturer throughout this territory, and a number from the east have expressed the intention of exhibiting.

Show Motion Pictures.

One of the features of the convention, which will bring nearly 5,000 delegates from every state in the union to Atlanta, will be a series of motion picture and stereopticon lectures, delivered by eminent authorities, showing the results which have been obtained from drainage of lands heretofore considered useless. Ben Johnson, of Lakeland, Fla., will deliver a lecture on the draining of the Everglade swamps, illustrated by slides.

Local arrangements are in charge of Judge Newton A. Morris, a well-known attorney of Marietta, and a member of the State Bar. Every detail has been prepared to accommodate the 5,000 delegates expected. Word has been received that the majority of the visitors from every town in the city in the southeast will either be present, or send representatives to the government of the congress, and the governors and state agricultural agents and heads of agricultural departments to attend the convention.

First Day's Program.

The program will be formally opened Wednesday at 2 o'clock, when Rev. M. Ashby Jones, of Atlanta, will deliver the invocation. Judge H. M. Dorsey and Mayor May will deliver welcome addresses. The presiding officer, in response to the general welcome, addressed the president of the congress, Edmund T. Perkins, of Chicago, and his annual report.

The first day's program will be an address on the "Progress of Drainage" by S. H. McCrary, head of the bureau of drainage and reclamation of the department of agriculture at Washington, following which R. D. Bowen, vice president of the Mississippi Valley association, will read a paper on "Duty and Opportunity in Drainage." Sessions will continue through Friday.

Niche Is Voted To Mark Twain In Hall of Fame

Noah Webster Refused Admission and Also
"Uncle Remus"—Roger Williams and Patrick
Henry Admitted.

New York, November 6.—Following a custom formally relegated to the top shelf to make room for those of Aesop, the electors of the New York University Hall of Fame yesterday announced the dedication of a niche to Mark Twain.

Noah Webster, after consideration, was not admitted.

Along with the great humorist, whose "Huckleberry Finn," "Innocents Abroad" and a hundred other light-hearted tales have endeared themselves to the American reader, five other famous men and one woman were accepted places. They were James Buchanan Eads, engineer; Patrick Henry, patriot and statesman; William Thomas Green Morton, physician; August Saint-Gaudens, sculptor; Roger Williams, preacher and founder of the state of Rhode Island, and Alice Frooman Palmer, teacher.

Mark Twain, who was voted on by the 101 electors under his true name, Samuel Langhorne Clemens, and Morton, received more votes than any of the others, each being named by 75 electors. In the case of each of the seven, 51 votes were necessary to elect.

Names in Fifteen Classes.

The names submitted to the electors in this, the fifth quinquennial election, were divided into 15 classes according to profession of the candidates. The electors are selected college presidents, historians, scientists, authors and editors, public officials, men and women of affairs and jurists.

In the first class, that of authors, six names were voted on besides those of the humorist and the dictionary maker. Among the others who, with Webster, were unsuccessful were Thomas Palme, Joel Chandler Harris and Walt Whitman.

John Brown, the abolitionist, received 21 votes in the reformers' class; Walter Reed 14 among the physicians; John Paul Jones 44 among the soldiers and sailors.

Samuel Adams, "father of the American revolution," got 24 votes, and William Penn 11 among the statesmen. In the artist class, which also included actors, James A. Mc-Neill Whistler received 31 votes and Joseph Jefferson 15.

Susan B. Anthony, the suffrage leader; Martha Washington and Pocahontas Rolfe were unsuccessful candidates in their respective fields of eminence.

Edas Bridged the Mississippi.

Besides bridging the Mississippi with a structure which bears his name, James Buchanan Eads constructed "within one hundred days" eight iron-clad steamers for use on the river, planned the deepening of the stream as far south as the mouth of the Ohio Jetty, and improved the south end of the Mississippi delta. He was born in Lawrenceburg, Ind., in 1823, and died in 1887 at Nassau, the Bahamas.

Patrick Henry represented Virginia in the first colonial congress and is known as the "orator of the people" for his eloquence. "If this be treason, make the most of it," and his immortal: "Give me liberty or give me death." He was born in Matthews, Va., in 1736, and died in 1799 in Charlotte county, Virginia.

Dr. Morton, discoverer of the ether anesthetic, practiced dentistry in Boston during the middle of the nineteenth century. The French Academy of Sciences gave him a gold medal for his work.

He died in 1851, and is buried in New York city, in 1855.

Samuel Gaudens, the Sculptor.

Samuel Gaudens is best known for his statue of President Lincoln in Lincoln park, Chicago, the Bas Relief "Adoration of the Cross" by the Angels, the "Sheep" and the "Sheepherd" in the St. Louis Art Museum, and the Diana atop the Madison Square Garden tower here. He was born in Dublin, Ireland, in 1805, and died in New York, in

Roger Williams left England after trouble with church and civil authorities, and in 1639 he left for New England, for the same reason.

He founded Providence, R. I., obtaining from the Indians the land which constitutes that state.

He was president of W. Wesley college from 1852 to 1857, raising the standard of scholarship and supervising the construction of several buildings to the satisfaction

He died in 1870.

Homer C. George, of the Wincoff

hotel, suffered the loss at 6 o'clock

Saturday night of a new Stevens automobile, which was stolen from Ellis street.

The automobile, which is khaki color with black bumpers, on front and rear, and is said to be the first to be equipped with black bumpers

STATE KIWANIS TO MEET TUESDAY

Program for Georgia Convention to Be Held in Atlanta Announced by Robert Wessels, District Governor.

The complete program of the state Kiwanis convention which convenes at the Kimball house next Tuesday for a two-day session was announced Saturday night by Robert S. Wessels, Kiwanis governor for the district of Georgia. The Kiwanis club of this city, with a membership of 210, will act as host to the convention.

The convention will be the first held for the clubs of the district of Georgia as the state organization is comparatively young. One year ago the Atlanta clubs were the only ones in the state, and today there are 18 clubs, with a total state-wide membership of approximately 1,100.

Since the state-wide organization was begun fifteen clubs have been organized, presented with charters from international headquarters. The following are the clubs: Albany, Americus, Auglaize, Cedartown, Columbus, Dublin, Eastman, Hawkinsville, LaGrange, Macon, Savannah and Washington.

200 Out-of-Town Delegates.

It is estimated that 200 out-of-town members will attend the convention, with members of their families, and friends, when they report to the registration booth in the Kimball house. At 12:30 o'clock Tuesday the visiting members will be the guests of the local clubs, and there will be a luncheon in the Capital City club.

The convention will be held in the Kimball house, and the first division, consisting of the fourth corps, will be the third largest number, being led only by the commander in chief.

The second division, consisting of the fifth corps, will be the fourth largest number, and the third division, the sixth, will be the fifth largest.

Major Wessels will welcome the delegates and an address of welcome will be delivered by Henry Heinz, chairman of the board of directors of the Atlanta club. The Atlanta club, president of the Savannah club, the principal address of the session will be made by Middleton S.
Wood, president of the Birmingham club. Governor Wessels will appoint the various convention committees, and will make a report on the work undertaken in the state.

HUBBARD BROS. & CO.

New Orleans, November 6.—(Special)—The cotton market showed renewed weakness and a further severe decline today. The cotton market is closing off to 18.60 or 63 points below and more than 3½ cents per pound below the high point reached at the "ogitme" or "ogitme" recovery. That delivery closed at 18.62 with the general list closing steady at a decline of 45 to 50 points.

The factors responsible for the continuation of the selling movement were considered practically the same as those noted during the early days of trading. They included reports of increased spot offerings in the south, more active hedge selling, continued decline in foreign exchange, and apprehensions that the weakness of foreign exchange would further curtail demand for exports. The sharp break in grain prices also had its effect on the weakness as some of the local cotton traders took as indicating that holding movements would sustain prices during the height of a new crop movement, but the feature was the heavy southward advance and reports of an earlier spot auction.

The market at the low point showed net losses of 55 to 60 cents with December spot at 18.60 and March at 18.54. Closing prices were within a few points of the lowest, although there was considerable wavering or profit-taking after the market had closed. Reports from the west indicated that recent colder weather had increased retail trade to come extent and expressed hope for sales of print cloths at Fall River for the week showed only a very slight increase, being estimated at 20,000 pieces.

COTTON PRICES BREAK UNDER HEAVY SELLING

New Orleans, November 6.—(Special)—The cotton market is almost constant in the cotton market today and the result was that prices opened lower, there were few upturns during the session and lowest prices came in the early part of the active months were 60 to 72 points under the final prices of yesterday. Some little realising of the spot on the short side of the nose steady and the net change for the day was a loss of 55 to 58 points.

Early offerings were unquestionably the most unfavorable tone of weekly reviews of trade in general and unfavorable references to the state of trade among cotton mills with the active months were caused by expectations of large gains in the cotton market due from the census bureau. Money was almost no influence and the market paid little attention to reports that Liverpool had a large part of the market in hours ago yesterday and that further business had been put through in the early hours of today. The prospect which came in the short side of the nose steady and the net change for the day was a loss of 55 to 58 points.

MASTER MIND AT SPECIAL SALE BUILDING

A CLEVER IDEA WHICH HAS PROVEN IT'S WORTH AND HAS BEEN DEVELOPED INTO A CONTINENTAL SERVICE FOR STORES OF THE BETTER CLASS

By A. J. Stewart

"Meet 'Tom' Kelly"

Twenty-five years ago timid minded and doubting business men prominent and important that were interested in the business scheme as place for an intensified and efficient selling force and, for that matter, that such an organization was impossible to achieve. Tom Kelly was a doubter, too, but of another sort. He doubted the foundation for such an opinion and, like the high-powered business man he is set about to prove them wrong and succeed.

Building upon the knowledge gleaned from his life as newsboy, printer's devil, college athlete and salesman, he stands today as a leader of the greatest commercial enterprise in the world.

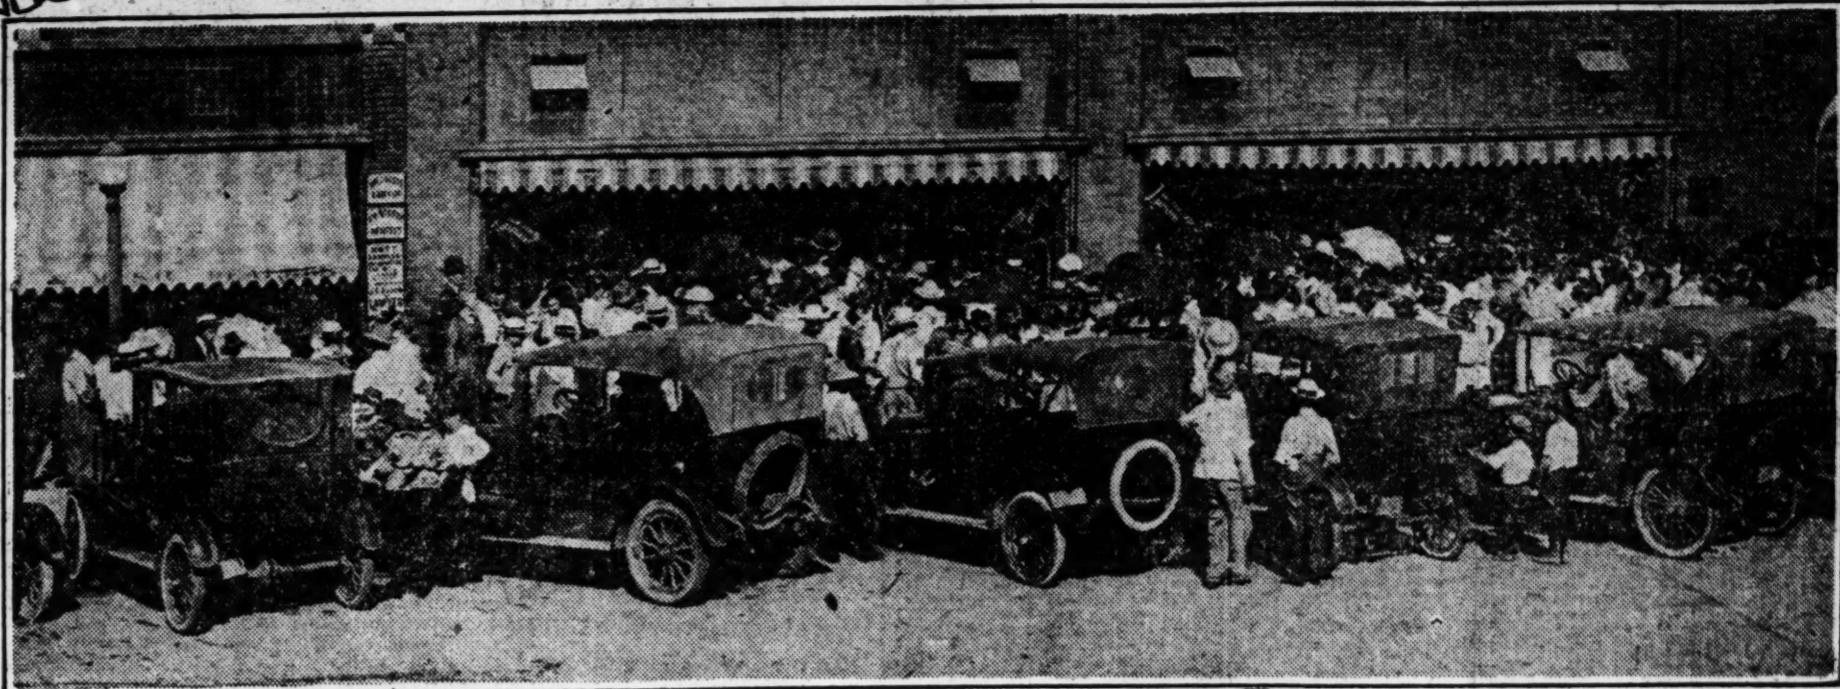

Mr. Kelly has a faculty of enlarging his outlook from day to day. He lives on the world's highway and commands new ideas, always building ing a deep and varied mental background which gives individuality to his ideas.

By his untiring energy and the organization which it has founded, he has made for his clients millions of dollars and, in so doing, has amassed for himself a comfortable fortune.

Mr. Kelly's rare vision and foresight taught him early in life to trust in himself and big, brawny men. Acting on his faith in human nature, he scoured the country and has secured the best brains money could buy and has given him a corps of advertising, genuine merchandising masters, correspondence experts and commercial artists and, by his methods, merchandising is turned to the advantage of the business man.

Mr. Kelly has a faculty of enlarging his outlook from day to day. He lives on the world's highway and commands new ideas, always building

What Kelly Does

He contracts to put on special sales or intensified selling campaigns for reduction, or overstocks—for the quick raising of money or for the complete closing out of stocks and fixtures, trusted sales, dissolution of partnership sales, or merely to expand business, on stocks of whatsoever kind or nature, no matter where located.

Special sales are produced by the Kelly system of advertising which is founded on the principles of direct result copy, meaning that it gets quick returns—no waits.

The basic principle of Kelly's campaign is to put on a "big, brawny punch" to make it interesting without being ridiculous—conservative enough to make it simple—truthful—out of the ordinary enough—minus the bombastic—to stampede the buying public without disgusting them, businesslike enough to get large returns—and economical in the extreme.

It gets and holds the public confidence for the merchant's community, the merchant's store, the merchant's goods, the merchant's name. It will widen the merchant's vision and build the merchant's prestige. It vitalizes the merchant's business with a powerful force that will drive a business on to the top.

He operates a thoroughly equipped Advertising and Art Department and Master Merchandise and Display Department, containing a Market Survey Division in order to investigate thoroughly each and every community so that correspondents and ad writers may intelligently work along the proven ground.

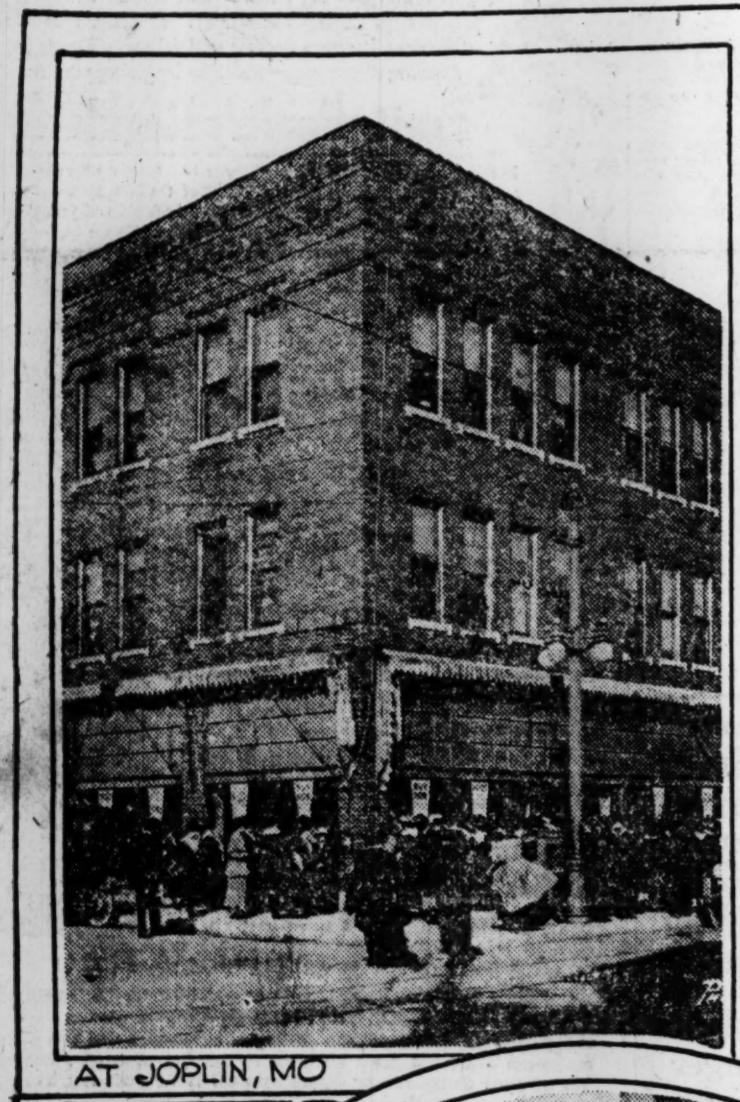

Kelly sends a trained representative to a merchant's store, no matter where located, to work with him and his business plan. These men are of sterling character and exceptional ability and have above the average intelligence, men of successful record and proven worth and are "schooled" in the Kelly way in advertising, merchandising and finance.

The representative Kelly sends out to conduct these sales are thoroughly equipped for the purpose of selling

How Kelly Does It

ing a stock of goods by truthful advertising and scientific merchandising display. The customer's interests are Kelly's interests and he wants to work as a merchant's partner.

With Kelly, special sales are big, scientific certainties. By the Kelly method risk has been eliminated and an honest merchandising policy, that is fair to both the public and the merchant, has been developed by his clever plans.

His wonderful service, known the country over as The T. K. Kelly Sales System, places the merchant's overhead expenses, multiplied sales turnover, broadens his trading radius, inspires the sales force. Kelly gets a store more new customers than any other way to do it. This is accomplished by correct analysis of the store and community. There is nothing mysterious about the Kelly method. Just a lot of business intelligence with the proper application (fair treatment—fair price).

Why Kelly is "Aped"

"Imitation is the sincerest form of flattery."

The Kelly method is the pioneer—the known standard of special sales methods. Consequently—the Kelly method is widely imitated.

Since the founding of the Kelly Institution, twenty-five years ago, it has seen hundreds of so-called sales systems and "experts". So-called special sales "experts" flourish for a time and die.

Kelly was the first to have the vision to have a sales force that could be maintained for merchants at no cost to them until they were ready to use it—service of master mind that could compete with and far exceed the commercial advertising of the larger Department stores.

Kelly has an organization of three hundred and forty-two salaried and an office force of one hundred and ninety-five, that could handle any dozen of the largest Department stores in the United States with ease, and is known by merchants as the Kelly method. Just a lot of business intelligence with the proper application (fair treatment—fair price).

To prove that this method is right, one has only to look up the trail of Kelly sales successes from coast to coast—from the little country store in the Carolina hills to the modern building on Cadillac Square, Detroit—it works equally as well.

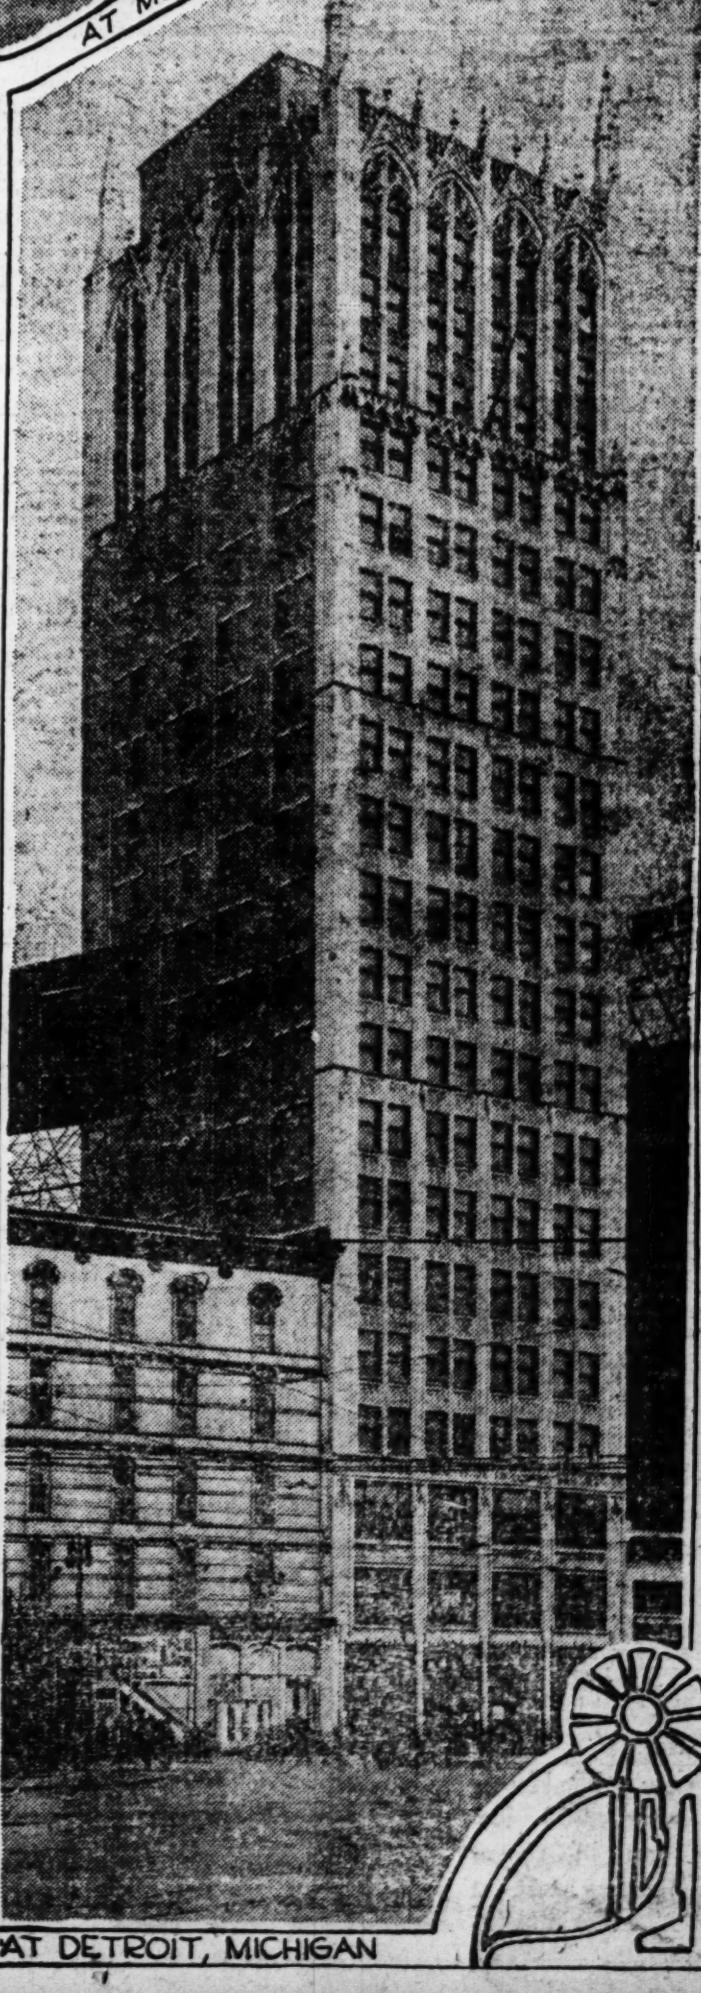

Kelly's method injects new impetus into the sales force and many successful big merchants of today owe their progress and success to his method.

The Kelly plan is used by merchants who want to unload, sell out entirely, expand business or just raise a little money, and they only pay a nominal fee for this service as they use it.

If you could only read some of the 14,000 letters of endorsement from satisfied merchants in the United States and Canada you would realize what a wonderful benefit this service renders to both merchant and customer.

PACKARD REDUCES NEW "SINGLE SIX"

Latest Packard Model Reduced to Less Than Three Thousand Dollars F.O.B. Factory.

Packard officials have authorized the reduction of the price of their "single six" which was placed on the market a few months ago.

W. H. Holt, manager of the Packard factory, issued the following statement, in which he states that production economies "in sight" make this reduction possible.

The Packard factory believes in keeping the wheels of industry turning at speed during this time of general unemployment, and in order to increase the production of its new single six through a price reduction from $2,640 to $2,575 f. o. b. factory.

As recently intended and announced, although the manufacturer of this car can just get along on a day, the interest in getting underway, the public has convinced the Packard management that this new car can be marketed in large quantities, and the enormous large production, together with purchasing economies within reach, will enable these low prices to be set.

EDGAR APPERSON SAYS PRICES MAY GO HIGHER

Says Conditions Do Not Permit Reduction in Prices On His Cars.

"Apperson prices will not be reduced," states Edgar Apperson. "The present prices are guaranteed until July 1, 1921, and there is little likelihood of there being any change then unless it is to increase them." When questioned as to whether information, Mr. Apperson had this to say of the present situation:

"The price of any piece of merchandise is based on the cost of raw materials plus the cost of labor and overhead, to which is added a fair profit."

"Now the greatest cost of a motor car is labor. That has gone down one pound. The other great cost is material. Neither has this item budged downward. In fact, during the last two months the cost of raw material has gone up."

"Already some of the makers who reduced prices are advocating a return to higher prices after January 1, 1921, because of the cost of materials." So, in my judgment, the sensible thing for the American public to do is to buy their motor car now. Unquestioned, prices will not be reduced on the contrary, they might have to be increased, so waiting might prove costly."

Estaver Sales to Have New Home on Peachtree

This large Peachtree store for the William A. Estaver Sales company, distributors for the Velie, will soon be completed, and the service station which is being erected in the rear, with a front on Courtland street, will be completed within about six weeks. This firm is expected to move within the next two weeks, according to Mr. Havens, general manager of the Atlanta office.

BRUNSWICK-ST. SIMON BRIDGES TO BE BUILT

Brunswick, Ga., November 6.—(Special)—The proposed meeting yesterday of the Young Men's club took up the question of building a bridge and causeway from this city to St. Simon's island, and decided to join hands with the St. Simon's Development company in their efforts. This question has been agitated for some time. The under-taking now seems to be with Brunswick's leading business men.

Addressed on the subject were W. J. Butt, president of the company; Mr. John C. Roddenberry, president of the Fiscal Sales company, which is to dispose of the stock in the company, and Millard Scott, attorney. It was announced that the company will begin construction of the two bridges, as well as the causeway, have been awarded to the Beasley Construction company of Savannah, and that the company will be headed by Mr. B. B. Scott.

Just as soon as this work is completed the machinery will be brought to this city and work on the St. Simon project will be started.

On Monday of next week the government engineer of this district will hold a hearing in this city, at which all those interested will be invited to appear. The hearing will be held in the city hall.

News reached Savannah today of the serious injury of C. L. Parker, a Savannah youth, 18 years old. He was in a hospital there, unconscious from a mysterious blow upon the head. Early Thursday morning, Parker was found in the company of several companions, when one asked to be allowed to get out of the car, as the "pace was too rapid" for him. When he was allowed to get out and the car drove on it was found that Mr. Parker, in the rear seat of the car, was huddled up unconscious from a blow on the head. How he received it nobody appears to know.

Whether there will be contests is not known. The Voter's league, an organization formed last fall, has named W. M. McElroy, Mr. Andrews and C. D. Ogg as its ticket. Today petitions are being circulated urging W. J. Butt, one of Brunswick's best-known young business men, to become a candidate.

Dentists Meet in Brunswick.

Brunswick, November 6.—(Special)—The semi-annual meeting of the Eleventh District Dental association was held in Brunswick yesterday. After the business session, the delegates to the convention were taken on a fishing trip. Officers for the year were elected as follows: President, Dr. A. L. Lowry, Valdosta; vice president, Dr. H. C. Johnson, Milledgeville; secretary-treasurer, Dr. Frank B. Atkinson, Brunswick. The next meeting will be held in Valdosta in May.

The election is for three city commissioners, the election to be held on December 1, and at which three men who are to serve Brunswick under the new commissionermanaged form of government will be elected.

Wants to Be Postmaster.

Thomasville, Ga., November 6.—(Special)—Speculation is rife as to the appointment to the position of postmaster at Thomasville. Mrs. Roddenberry, widow of the late Congressman S. A. Roddenberry, has held the office for two terms, and has been term will be held until 1923. She holds the office under civil service. Report has it that there are in the neighborhood ten aspirants for the office.

Educational Rally Held.

Thomasville, Ga., November 6.—(Special)—The educational rally held here yesterday for the teachers of the school from the country districts was attended by 125 county teachers. The meetings were in the large auditorium of the Commercial association. Luncheon was served at noon by women of the Thomasville Study class.

Named Bank Examiner.

Thomasville, Ga., November 6.—(Special)—Paul Seary, assistant cashier of the Bank of Thomasville, has obtained a position with the state department of banking as state bank examiner. Mr. Seary is the second man chosen to this position from Thomasville. B. J. Kincaid, also of the Bank of Thomasville, being the other.

Sheriff to Oppose Chief.

Thomasville, Ga., November 6.—(Special)—Thomasville is certain of one lively race in the municipal primary between the candidate for the office of chief of police, Chas. A. Milton, will be opposed by Sheriff W. A. Rehbein. Both men have so many friends that it is hard to forecast the outcome of the race.

Endeavorers in Session.

Thomasville, Ga., November 6.—(Special)—The Christian Endeavor Societies of the Southwest District are in session in Camilla, the first meeting having been held last night. The meetings are presided over by Ernest Milton, of this city, president of the Southwest district, and Miss Marion Hoen, of Boston, secretary of the district.

Cane Visitors Barred.

Thomasville, Ga., November 6.—(Special)—No visitors allowed at cane mills or in cane patches, the notice being posted at many of the large sugarcane mills in this section of the state. There will be large quantities of cane saved to be grown by the enforcement of this regulation.

W. C. SIMMS DIES

Milledgeville Cotton Broker Stricken With Paralysis.

Milledgeville, Ga., November 6.—Paul C. Simms, a well-known citizen, in the cotton business here for several years, was stricken with paralysis in the Elks' club Thursday night and was taken to the local hospital, where he died early Friday morning.

He was a native of Meriwether county, 51 years old, living for a number of years at Mansville, Fulton county, and engaged in mercantile business.

He leaves a wife and six children. The funeral will be held Sunday, with burial here.

NEW MUSIC IN REVIEW

There is no singer whose voice and methods are so familiar to the world at large—then Enrico Caruso, who can still appeal so strongly even to the well-known of our childhood take on new life and vigor at his first note. Such will be the verdict of those who will hear him sing.

Whispering "The Japanese Standard" and "Avalon" are the fox-trots. "Best Ever" is the one-step. Men's songs are certain in their appeal, and Elsie Baker sings one of the very best when she sings "The Modern Style." Modern has indeed a modern and emotional type, but is not one whit more appealing than "Drowsy Boy," sung by Elsie Baker and Olive Kline. Here we have a little more, and just such as will delight thousands of American mothers.

Alleen Stanley, new Victor artist, made clear in "Zing, Baby, Zing" and "The Broadway Blue." Miss Stanley comes to swell the ranks of Victor artists fresh from her success in "Silent Sirens." Her voice is remarkably strong, voice—her enunciation is perfect. Both songs are models of just what good singing should be, and both there is enough rhythm to make an octogenarian prance!

"Tired of Me," sung by Henry Burr in his best style, is the utterance of one deeply worn but still a heart that remains faithful within. It has a waltz tune that can easily be followed and more than enough of the popular manner. The Peerless quartet sings "I'd Like to Go to Sleep and Wake Up in My Mammy's Arms," which is in ragtime rhythm and lies away at last with a most beautiful effect.

New Rights of Africa.

An interpretation by Kreisler is always a master of import, but which gains in effect from its very simplicity. Sophie Braslau has poured her whole heart into "Ever of Thee I'm Fondly Dreaming."

Out of the most delicately and elegantly poetic records Mischa Elman has ever made is the Nocturne (Op. 54, No. 4), by Edward Grieg, which Mischa Elman has himself arranged for the violin.

The famous love avowal from "Fedorov" has been rendered this morning by Edward Johnson in the medium of music only. It gives a glimpse of the Indles seen through the introspective eyes of a Russian.

When we settle in our seats to listen to the singing of Galloway, we know in advance that now will come a treat. So it is when we hear her sing "Clavelitos," a Spanish song, and her Spanish lyrics are poetic to the highest degree.

"Thank God for a Garden!" This is the ever popular realm of the young singer. Mischa Elman has an enthusiastic following which cannot but be enlarged by the success that will undoubtedly meet his "Waiting for the Sun to Come Out" and "Candy Cane." Without doubt "Song of Xanadu" Both songs had their origin in popular musical comedies. Equally delightful is "I'll Be With You in Apple Blossom Time," some song by Charles Harrison known to sing it. Louise Terrell and William Robyn unite in singing "Tripoli," a sort of African-Spanish melody that has an irresistible charm. Mr. Robyn's previous success has already made him a host of enthusiastic friends.

Miss Mabel is a new Victor artist from whom great things may well be expected.

The ECHO of YESTERYEARS

It is not strange that motordom can scarce conceive it possible to excel the fine creations that you enjoy.

It has been so since the making of motor cars began.

The motor cars of even then were marvels—for their day.

As passing time brought forth its new achievements, each thrilled you with its fresh sensations—then you wondered how you endured the car before.

Each new achievement seemed unsurpassable—until by genius it was surpassed.

Each seemed the great finality—yet will not each see its glory wane?

As the splendid mechanisms you have known roll on, it is only natural that they seem the ultimate in luxurious travel.

And yet, the seeming of the ultimate today is but an echo of the seeming in yesteryears.

For in the Lincoln car are revelations, new ease, new comforts, charms and fascinations which motordom has never known before.

NEXT YEAR TO BE BEST IN MOTOR TRUCK SALES

Prominent Detroit Manufacturer Says Truck Business Will Boom in 1921.

In spite of a slight attitude of pessimism on the part of a few, motor truck manufacturers and dealers are looking forward to a year of unequalled prosperity in 1921, according to M. L. Pulcher, vice president and general manager of the Federal Motor Truck company, Detroit.

"Water transportation, though limited by natural boundaries and to an ever greater extent by the number of railroads and waterways, is nevertheless enjoying a period of unequalled activity," he explains. "Electric and steam traction, all told, is at the very limit of their capacities and it must be years before they are in a position to even take care of the business, which is most naturally theirs."

"But the motor truck has no such limits. It is limited only by the ways to haul upon. Roads go almost everywhere—where rails and waterways often cannot go, and so the motor truck must earn the greatest activities in the transportation industry."

"Local and temporary conditions, however, it is true, operated to slow up the motor vehicle industry. In certain localities the wide-awake dealer and manufacturer is not doing the same really, however."

The great growth of the motor truck as a necessary utility on the farm, at the mines and in factories and stores is a true barometer of the stability of its future."

13 Combinations Have Few Takers In Local Hotels

"Room No. 273; it's the last one in the house."

"No, I'll go to another hotel."

The traveler turned from the desk in one of Atlanta's leading hotels and made his way out in search of another stopping place. The clerk smiled an understanding smile.

"What was the matter?" repeated the clerk, with evident pleasure.

"The numbers on the door of that room add up to make 12."

As a result of further questioning it developed that a large percentage of the clerks in the hotel industry refuse to occupy a room bearing numbers which will yield 12 by a mathematical trick. Such rooms are 12, 21, 45, etc., and taboo for many.

In discussing the superstition, the clerk explained that many hotels have merely skipped such numbers as the army overcame the legend.

Announcement of the hotel's return to the army overcame the legend.

It had been a woman guest who came recently for a room. He offered her $13 and she replied with indignation that she would not have it so grossed.

It was then that it was proposed that two years before she had occupied the room during the winter.

While in that room her husband had been stricken with "flu," her little boy had broken his arm and her youngest child had died of diphtheria. She concluded with the decision that she was not superstitious, but just careful.

The clerk, being a poor mathematician, offered her $26.

She said no, but he insisted.

Instantly she flew into a rage and left the hotel, accusing the clerk of attempting to "trick" her. The consensus of opinion among hotel officials is that there are more superstitious women than men.

Rockefeller-Sage Land Deeded to Louisiana For Wild Life Refuge

New York, November 6.—The Rockefeller foundation tonight announced a gift to the state of Louisiana of the 25,000-acre grand Chenier Wild Life refuge, purchased from the state in 1914 and since under supervision of the Louisiana department of conservation.

The tract, in Cameron and Vermilion parishes, Louisiana, was bought as a contribution to the country's wild life preservation. In presenting it to the state, the foundation did not name the amount, but stipulated certain conditions to guarantee its effective maintenance as perpetual wild life preserves, which Louisiana accepted.

New Orleans, November 6.—The formal transfer of Marsh Island as a wild life refuge by gift from the Russell Sage Foundation to the state of Louisiana was announced yesterday by Governor James M. Alexander, of the Louisiana state department of conservation.

Announcement of the gift is coincident with the decision to return a similar gift of land from the Rockefeller foundation lying close to Marsh Island on the mainland in Cameron and Vermilion parishes.

Marsh Island, which was acquired by the late Mrs. Russell Sage several years ago, has an area of 75,000 acres and lies off the Gulf of Mexico off the coast of Iberia, St. Mary and Vermilion parishes, its northern and eastern shores forming East Cote, West Cote and Vermilion bays, noted famous for the hundreds of migratory waterfowl during the winter months.

This gift to the state, while of vast importance to the nation, constitutes but a unit in the great project which will in the near future give to Louisiana the largest wild life refuge on the continent. Marsh Island, the Grand Chenier tract, the gift of the Rockefeller foundation, the Ward McPherson tract and an additional tract in Vermilion parish for which operations are gradually being acquired, will eventually form a significant natural preserve, covering an area of 500 square miles, with a coast line on the gulf of 75 miles. It is the natural habitat and breeding grounds of a great many species of birds and the smaller mammals, and will unquestionably save many varieties from practical annihilation.

COX AND TAGGART TO VISIT ALABAMA ON HUNTING TRIP

Montgomery, Ala., November 6.—Governor James M. Cox, of Ohio; Senator Harrison, of Mississippi; and Representative Thomas Taggart, of Indiana, will reach Montgomery Thursday morning en route to Tuskegee, Ala., where they will be the guests of Colonel R. L. Lasell, prominent planter and sportsman of Macon county, on a hunting trip.

SAFE CRACKERS LOOT NORTH CAROLINA BANK

Spring Hope, N. C., November 6.—Safe crackers entered the Citizens' bank here last night and stole $60,000 in bonds and notes from safety deposit boxes. The robbery was not discovered until the janitor opened the building. The robber failed to break the safe, and the bank's funds were left intact. L. E. Upchurch, who had $35,000 in Liberty bonds and stock certificates in deposit boxes, was the heaviest loser.

JOHNSTON TO ADDRESS MEN'S BROTHERHOOD

Rev. Thomas H. Johnston, dean of St. Philip's cathedral, will be the special speaker at the monthly banquet of the Men's Brotherhood of the Gordon Street Presbyterian church here, which will be held Saturday evening at No. 192 Greenwich street, at 7 o'clock. The program includes several solos by George W. Grant. Covers will be laid for fifty men.

PLAN OF DANIELS OPPOSED BY BLANTON

Washington, November 6.—Representative Blanton, democrat, Texas, made public today an open letter to Secretary of War, in which he opposed the announced cruises of the Atlantic and Pacific fleets next summer. The Atlantic fleet is to go to North Africa, the Pacific to the Pacific to Australia and New Zealand.

Mr. Blanton said congress had not authorized such cruises, and that naval statistics showed that it would require at least 70 per cent more coal and oil than ordinarily to run these two fleets on such a cruise.

SURCHARGE IS DENIED ON PULLMAN TICKETS

Montgomery, Ala., November 6.—Handing down its decision today on the petition of railroads operating in Alabama for concurrent fares, the railroad commission, man and passenger rates were granted by the interstate commerce commission, the Alabama public service commission denied that section of the petition asking to impose a surcharge of 50 per cent on passengers traveling in Pullman cars.

ARSON INDICTMENTS AGAINST 14 PERSONS

Montgomery, Ala., November 6.—The Montgomery county grand jury today returned fourteen indictments against persons alleged to have participated in a series of fires in cases in this county last Saturday and Sunday nights. Two gins, a store, a sawmill, three residences and numerous other buildings were burned and three negroes killed in cobbs with officers during the several days of disbursement.

ATTORNEYS DECLINE TO DEFEND WANDERER

Chicago, November 6.—Efforts to bring Carl Wanderer, the man convicted of the murder of his wife, to trial for slaying the "ragged stranger," whom he is alleged by the state, to be an employed Negro, failed today when Chicago attorneys refused to take the case. Attorneys for the defense, however, at the first trial declined to continue his counsel, and an appeal by Judge Paul for lawyers to volunteer failed to bring in any.

Wanderer will be taken to Joliet next week to begin service of a 25-year murder sentence and will be brought to Chicago next month, when an effort will be made to bring him to trial on the second murder charge.

Minister Locates Cement.

Dacatur, Ga., November 6.—Rev. J. E. Bennett, D. D., a Baptist minister, now residing near Stone Mountain, in DeKalb county, is owner of 300 acres of land in Bleckley county which has been found to be very poor in cement. A survey of the property indicated a much raw material to yield 150,000,000 barrels of the finished product. Steps are being taken to develop the cement property, and the company is being organized to be known as the Magnolia development company, with F. N. Berry, general manager.

Cotton Crop Falls Off.

Thomasville, Ga., November 6.—Special Agent H. B. Stubbs shows that the cotton ginned in Thomas county this year is less than last year. According to this report, there was a total cotton crop of 192,000 prior to October 18, 3,541 bales, as compared with 5,588 bales up to the same date last year.

Superior Court Recesses.

Dublin, Ga., November 6.—Lawrence county court has adjourned until Monday morning when it will take up the third week of the October term. Criminal cases have been set for all next week. The grand jury has been summoned after finding a large number of true bills, mostly in cases for violation of the prohibition law.

Senator Harris to Speak.

Savannah, Ga., November 6.—(Special.)—Senator William F. Harris has been invited to make an address Armistice day here, in connection with the celebration of the Armistice. Mayor Stewart has proclaimed the day a holiday and parades and various features have been planned.

Commit Suicide.

Athens, Ga., November 6.—(Special)—Kendall Lilly, well-known young brick mason, drank carbolic acid and committed suicide in a local poolroom here at 11:30 o'clock tonight. Walking in from the rear of the place, Lilly stated to the crowd that he had taken the acid and was about to die. A physician was summoned but was too late, the man dying shortly after his arrival. No cause is known.

Decision Affects Neuman.

Washington, November 6.—(Special)—Joint resolution on the Gulf, Mobile and Northern railroad, applicable on manufactured products from Newman, Ga., and on hay and straw from points in Alabama, were suspended today by the interstate commerce commission until March 20, 1921.

Madison County Bank Safety Deposit Boxes Broken Into by Thieves

Danielsville, Ga., November 6.—Yeggmen blew the safe in the Madison County bank at Colbert early today and robbed thirty private boxes of deeds and liberty bonds. The bank's own money, in another compartment, was not touched.

Sergeant Kassel Elected.
Deblin, Ga., November 6.—Sergeant Kassel, of the Deblin Guards, has been elected second lieutenant of the company, to succeed Lieutenant C. D. Hillbun, who has resigned.

GIRL PUTS MONEY IN HER STOCKINGS AND FOILS BANDITS

Chicago, November 6.—Four pay roll bandits, who attacked Miss Marie Radner, bookkeeper of a broom company, and fled with her pay roll satchel this morning, were enabled to divide $9 in small change among themselves. Miss Radner had placed the bulk of the pay roll, all currency, in her stockings before leaving the bank. She was slightly bruised when knocked down by one of the bandits.

PAIGE

THE MOST BEAUTIFUL CAR IN AMERICA

A DEMONSTRATION of the new Paige five-passenger Glenbrook quickly proves the advantages of the modern viewpoint of engineering over what might be termed "old school mechanics."

Power and speed in abundance are needed today to guarantee adequate performance. Sudden emergencies of daily service require a motor that responds instantly to every demand.

Ride in the Glenbrook and observe how it accelerates from a speed of five to twenty-five miles an hour in nine seconds flat. Test its speed; try it out over bad roads and up steep grades.

That's the sort of demonstration that will reveal the full advantages of this distinctly new engineering development.

RUBBER MANUFACTURER PLANS EXPANSION HERE

Diamond Holfast Rubber Co. Plans Erection of New Plants in Atlanta.

An interesting example of the growth of Atlanta is evidenced in the new expansion of the Diamond Holfast Rubber company, which is to include the building of a new factory with greatly increased facilities for the manufacture of its products.

Organized by H. L. Diamond in 1916 with a limited capital, the company has made remarkable progress and today has products in twenty-four states in the union. Because of the keen and constantly growing demand for Holfast products, such as knobs, tires, automobile accessories, such as inner tubes, fan belts, and patches, it was decided to increase the capitalization.

A current issue of 4,000 shares of common stock is now being offered to the public.

The proceeds from the issue of this stock will be used first to increase the production of the present plant, then in the construction of a new plant, and the purchase of machinery and equipment for the manufacture of additional lines of rubber products.

H. L. Diamond, president and founder of the business, remains the active head. Mr. Diamond has perfected several innovations in rubber goods now produced by the company, as well as others which the increased capitalization will provide.

He is exceptionally qualified by training and experience to supervise the development of production, and so on.

The secretary is Mr. Herman Ditt. His experience in rubber goods production includes ten years as chemist with the Goodyear & Wixson, Detroit, subsequently becoming general superintendent of the Lions Tire & Rubber company, Lafayette, Ind. Just prior to his connection with the Diamond Holfast Rubber company, Mr. Ditt was for two years active in the research and development department of the Firestone Tire & Rubber company. His experience will be an invaluable aid in assisting in increasing the factors output in accordance with the enlarged production program.

Previous to his connection as managing director of the company, Mr. Ditt was division advertising manager for the southeastern division of the American Multigraph Sales Co. of Cleveland. He has extensive experience in advertising, selling and in sales promotion work with various nationally known concerns. Because of his experience in direct mail advertising, he has had a wide experience in planning sales campaigns in dealer co-operative advertising, and the results from salesmen. His experience should be of especial value to the company in marketing their increased output to be added from time to time.

Mr. W. P. Lautensahler, factory superintendent, has had extensive experience in the production of rubber products of every kind. Prior to his connection with this company, his training includes one and one-half years with the Goodyear Rubber company, seven years with the Diamond Rubber company, and over fourteen years with the Firestone Tire & Rubber company.

The location of the new factory building will be on a site within two miles of Atlanta. Labor cost will be considerably less than in the Akron district. Better living conditions and a more equitable climate will tend to reduce turnover to a minimum of negligible importance. Atlanta is 700 miles nearer the source of raw rubber, permitting the saving of considerable shipping and handling charges. Cotton, which is used in the fabrication of many rubber products, is right at hand. An ample supply of water is easily accessible. Atlanta is the logical location for this great rubber manufacturing plant.

Maxwell Cops Prize In Dallas Economy And Endurance Run

In a recent endurance and economy test held under the auspices of The Dallas Times-Herald, Maxwell cars outdistanced every other class in class and second in all classes. In motor, ignition, transmission, steering, and body design, the Maxwell scored 100 per cent according to information received by Joseph G. Blount, local distributor. The test run covered 539 miles, much of it over rough country.

Wedding Advertised Of Barnesville Couple On Train and in City

Barnesville, Ga., November 6.—(Special)—The hymenial path was anything but smooth for Miss May Ann Barrett and Howard Collier, both well-known in Barnesville social circles, when they contracted the bonds of holy matrimony yesterday and boarded a train for Atlanta en route to points of interest in the north and east.

Friends of the young couple gave them hearty good-wishes, especially the hamlets, divesting the fact that they were newlyweds all over the train, in which they rode to Atlanta, and all along the route the passengers subjected to the grinning gaze of interested male passengers.

Mr. Dealer: Mr. Car Owner, what are you going to do about this?

Effort Begun to Add $150,000,000 To Automobile Industry Taxation

The national Industrial Conference Board has suggested that when congress convenes in December the present excise tax of 5 per cent should be retained on passenger cars and in addition there should be enacted a law taxing automobiles 50 cents a horse-power to be paid by the owners, annually and a federal tax of 1 cent a gallon on all gasoline used. This would add approximately $150,000,000 to our tax bill next year.

Mr. Dealer: Mr. Car Owner, what are you going to do about this? If you feel that you should not bear this extra burden, let your representatives know it.

Thinking their torment were over, the two newlyweds, Atlanta Mr. and Mrs. Collier stopped at a local hotel and ordered supper. At this juncture, a bellboy came through the dining room, calling "Mr. and Mrs. Newlyweds Collier," and at the same moment their eyes caught the gleam of handbills in every person's hand in the establishment.

Despite the good-natured fun of the blushing young couple, they understood that friends of childhood in Barnesville were accepting the joke with equanimity. Both are well-known Barnesville and vicinity. Mr. Collier's a sister of Curtis Barrett and member of a prominent family, while Mr. Collier is a promising young business man.

U. S. AND JAPAN AGREE ON CALIFORNIA LAW

Washington, November 6.—An announcement today by the state department that Roland G. Morris, American ambassador to Japan, had been given a 50-day leave of absence, was taken as an indication that the negotiations with Baron Shidehara, the Japanese ambassador, regarding the anti-alien land legislation in California, practically not been completed.

Mr. Morris, who returned from Tokio in June, has been carrying on the discussion with the Japanese government, and it is believed that details of the new treaty with Japan, based on the California law adopted in Tuesday's elections, have been agreed upon. When the treaty is put in final form it will be referred for approval by the two governments.

State department officials would say whether the negotiations had been completed, nor would they add to the announcement concerning the date of his absence, further than to say that it had no particular significance.

Unless it gives the simple, staple results which the Hupmobile owner gets, no car can truly be said to be worth what it costs.

It should everlastingly keep going. It should not have to be "hauled home" except for accident.

The repair costs per year should be negligible. (We believe the average cost per car for Hupmobile repairs is lower than any car in the world.)

It should, like the Hupmobile, have a reputation for low-cost long life so good that it will always command a high price when re-sold.

These things are axiomatic. They make up the thing known as value. They are the things you pay for and get in the Hupmobile.

REAL ESTATE—For Sale | REAL ESTATE—For Sale

4-Room House, No. 28 Cumming Street. Elevated Lot. $2,250

THIS house is suited to the needs of some friend of ours, who wants a home at a moderate price and one that is well located. We have seen it in the market, and think that the owner has made up his mind to sell the place at once and wants to do so this week. Now you have the whole story. Come Monday and make an offer. In one block of 3 car lines and near Peachtree crossing.

Peachtree Road Lot, 100x900 and 165 Feet Wide in Rear. Price $4,000.

NOW you must certainly understand that this beautiful lot on Peachtree, covered all over with mature trees, is a bargain at $4,000. One line, electric lights, city water, phone service in front. You ought to grab this off the hook at once. Look again, 165 feet wide in rear. Topographically fine and we consider it the greatest bargain on Peachtree.

Beautiful Ansley Park Lot, 50x300.

Bargain—$2,950.

If you are in the market for the handsomest lot in Ansley Park for the money you don't have to go any further, but put on your emergency brakes right here. Slightly elevated, fine drainage and in one of the choice sections of that lovely residence park. Another lot near by, 75x200, for $3,500. Now is the time to buy your lot as you get the pick of the bunch.

8-Room, 2-Story House, Sleeping Porch, Tile Bath, Corner Lot.

IF it's a north side home you are obliged to have and you want a house with all modern conveniences and spacious rooms, there's no alternative but to camp right here. The house is covered with slate, the lot is elevated and has a fine view. This is a fine opportunity to own a home that is well worth the asking price. If you understand what that means, come right to see us. We are your friends as long as you have got a dollar.

6-Room, Modern, Bungalow—Level Lot 200 Feet Deep—Five Tons Coal, 3 Years' Supply of Kindling—All for Only $5,900.

THE owner of this attractive home has been transferred to another city and he just wants to sell, and you bet the price made will sell when you are born. There's a garage, chicken run, wire fencing, etc. Large basement, granite and solid brick foundation. Short distance from Agnes Scott college and popular car line. $1,500 cash and $500 month. Price reduced from $7,500. Ask for Mr. Leming.

Piedmont Road Lot, 100x800, Between Peachtree and Roswell Roads—A Perfect Beauty—$3,750.

WE know you will be tickled to death when you see the beautiful topography of this lot. It's elevated, shaded, and the rear is fenced and there's some fruit trees on it. How on earth you could pass it up when your optics have been improved and you have full brain cells, we would not understand. City water, electric lights, telephone service in front. Finest section. Surroundings ideal.

BUILDING LOTS IN WEST END

JUST two weeks ago we offered to the public a subdivision at Gordon and Holderness streets for the Murphy Real Estate Co., and the rapidity with which the lots were purchased has clearly demonstrated the fact that there is a splendid demand for desirable building lots in West End.

Monday we will offer to the public another subdivision belonging to the same company. The lots are just one block from the Gordon street car line, one block from the Lee street car line and are right on the Ashby street car line.

They are close to the Lee street and Peeples street schools, two of the best in the city, they are convenient to churches and in fact possess every desirable feature for a high-class, moderate priced home.

The prices range from $1,200 down, and the terms are one-third cash, with balance in one and two years. 7 per cent interest, payable semi-annually.

The lots will be sold with restrictions that no lot may be used for other than residential purposes. The houses must be back twenty feet from the front line, and must not be sold to or occupied by persons of African descent.

Plates have been mailed to practically every one in West End as well as the majority of the contractors in the city. In the event that you did not receive one, if you will call at our office, we will be delighted to send you one.

There is no other property in the city of Atlanta where the individual or corporation can secure blocks of building lots for the construction of homes.

Y. W. C. A. Girls Offer Novel Rummage Sale.

Rummage sales in Atlanta since the days of "Marthaville" have been conducted by the Y. W. C. A. club or church society having to raise a certain sum of money would ask for a rummage, who cannot be carted to a certain store or because Peter's street and the all-day sale would be put on, etc. Now it is left to the Y. W. C. A. girls to get up something new even though it is a sale. The Y. W. C. A. basketball team needs money for their "Y." league, so these girls will enter a rummage sale on the evening of Friday, November 12, at 8:15 o'clock, in the Y. W. C. A. gymnasium. The price of admission will be a bundle of rags and prizes will be awarded for the best two bundles of rummage. The first prize will be a $2.50 gold place, and the second prize a box of chocolates.

Following the rummage party the "Y." basketball girls will have their rummage sale in the same old way, but they will be at the rummage at one time which will facilitate matters in the sale.

"Rummage Party" night the program will consist of a wide variety to be put on by the "Y." girls, a mock basketball game and stunts. Everybody is invited, girls with their escorts, mothers and fathers.

For Miss Cole.

An enjoyable occasion of Saturday was the informal luncheon given by Mrs. George Boynton at her home on Peachtree road, in honor of Miss Laura Cole. The luncheon table was artistically decorated. A silver vase with yellow chrysanthemums was in the center, surrounded by silver compotes with yellow mints. Daintily hand-painted place cards marked with the names of the guests were laid for Miss Laura Cole, Miss Clara Cole, Mrs. Henry Stanton, of Chicago; Mrs. Albert Barnett, Mrs. William Close and Mrs. Boynton.

EVERYWOMAN'S SALE of NEWEST and MOST FASHIONABLE FALL and WINTER MILLINERY!

Every Hat
In This Sale Is Half Price
and Even Less!

—Most every woman in Atlanta knows and waits for Rich's Everywoman's Sale. But perhaps you're a newcomer. If you are and want to know more about this Sale, just ask any woman who attended the last one—or the one before that—or the first one we held. What she'll tell you will make you decide right then and there to be here the very first thing tomorrow morning. For this is a Sale no woman wants to miss.

—Rich's Everywoman's Sale brings you hats from the finest milliners in America; brings you hats in the millinery styles of the hour and in advance styles; it brings you the loveliest hats of the season at a fraction of their regular prices!

—That's the reputation of Everywoman's Sale. And this year it bids fair to break all previous records. There are more hats in this Sale. And they're finer hats than even past Everywoman Sales would lead you to expect.

$25 to $35 Original Model Hats from the Best Designers Are —In this lot of hats are a few original models from Lewis and Jeanne—famous French designers. But most of them come from such famous American designers as Bruck-Weiss, Rawak, Blue Bird, Cecile, etc. You'll find their labels stitched in the lining of each hat. They're beautiful things. Made of the loveliest of the season's fashionable materials. Styled in the most bewitching manner. No two of them alike. These hats were designed to sell for two and three times their Everywoman's Sale price. Why, noteworthy milliners the country over have paid large sums of money merely for the privilege of copying some of these beautiful creations!

$15 to $25 Dress Hats that Are Beautiful Are Priced

—Beautiful hats are these in distinctive and unusual styles. There are lovely hats to wear with tailleur suits; hats that may be worn with either suits or dresses; hats to wear with afternoon dresses; and dainty hats for evening wear. Most of these hats are faithful copies of beautiful model hats. They're fashioned of fine Lyon's silk velvet, panne velvet and duvetyne. Trimmed with feathers and embroidery. Such beautiful hats you'd never, never, never associate with such a little price as $8.85.

SEE these hats in our windows today. Then you can judge them for yourselves. Just reading about them can never convey what splendid hats they are!

First Chamber Concert At Capital City Club.

Miss Florence Macbeth, the lovely and rarely gifted American coloratura soprano from the Chicago Opera company, will open the new series Intime of the Atlanta Music study class Monday afternoon at the Capital City Club. The admission price is prompt $1 at 4 o'clock, and will be given in the ballroom of the club. Miss Macbeth is the best known of the young American singers because of her unusual success recently with the Chicago opera. New York critics and opera lovers alike have been greatly impressed by her singing. The Chicago company visited the metropolis, and in concert work she has rapidly assumed a commanding position.

It is fitting that this beautiful young singer should inaugurate the new series at the Capital City Club, where she will have unusual musical and social interest during the present season.

The most cultured people of the city entered the ballroom of the club, and it was evident that the demands that the entire regular seating capacity was exhausted long before the close of the season sale. There have been quite a number of

THE CONSTITUTION, ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 7, 1920.

Important Issues Discussed At Women Voter's Lunch

The first of the series of November luncheons given by the Atlanta League of Women Voters proved a brilliant affair. Many women from all parts of the state were present, owing to the meeting of the federal clubs of the state.

Mrs. Harry P. Hermance, chairman of the league, presided most charmingly. She introduced in turn all of the members of the state board of the league who were present, including Stella Akin, from Savannah, spoke on the importance of having women in the government.

Miss Anna Anderson followed Mrs. Neely on the same theme.

Mrs. Hermance explained briefly about the registration of the voter.

Mrs. Neely announced that the citizenship school would begin on November 16 at the Chamber of Commerce building. For instance, in Chatham county, the members of the board of education are appointed for one year.

Miss Anna Anderson followed Mrs. Neely on the same theme.

Mrs. Hermance explained briefly about the registration of the voter.

Mrs. Neely emphasized the importance of not accepting ready-made opinions.

Miss Sally Fanny Gleaton spoke on an educated woman citizenship.

Miss Laura Smith stressed the importance of achieving the right to vote.

Miss Anna Anderson followed Mrs. Neely on the same theme.

Mrs. Emily McDougal reiterated the gist of Miss Freeman's plea.

The above are all members of the state board of directors of the voters' league.

The luncheon lasted until 1:30 o'clock, just one hour from the moment it began. A special point is being made of limiting the round table discussion and the luncheon.

Miss Anna Anderson emphasized the immediate benefits the women could obtain if they organized and cooperated.

The ward leaders were then called upon and the following: Mrs. J. T. Akridge, Mrs. H. A. Smith, Mrs. C. P. Osburn, Mrs. I. C. Smulian, Mrs. W. T. Mooney, Mrs. Edgar Neely, Mrs. J. H. Gibbs, Mrs. Claude McGinnis, gave short reports upon what they were doing, how many members they had and what they expected to accomplish within the next few weeks.

Miss Anna Anderson, one of the district leaders in the eighth ward, spoke interestingly upon her experiences.

Mrs. DuBois said a few words about education.

afternoon at the Capital City Club tea will be served and an adjoining room to which all the members of the Series Intime of the Atlanta Music Study club, under whose auspices the concert is to be given, are invited to have tea. The admission is 50 cents and the tickets are secured at $1 per plate by telephoning Mrs. R. T. Dorsey, Jr., at Hemlock 1671, or Mrs. Paul Baker at Hemlock 1676.

The tea will be a most interesting social feature of the musical season, as it will afford the music lover an opportunity to hear the concert and an opportunity to hear the distinguished young artist. Miss Macbeth will be the guest of the officers of the club, who will be seated at the piano.

Elaborate decorations will be used, including large baskets of yellow and white chrysanthemums. The tea will be a most interesting and enjoyable for the many who have already signified their intention of being present.

Sunday Night Dinners

At Capital City Club.

Bright music will be a feature of enjoyment of the dinner tonight at the Capital City Club, these 10 assemblies many informal parties. Chances—dances will present the following program:

March, "The Rookies" Drumm. Value, "Gypsy Love," Lehrer. Suite, "Graciennise," German. Gavotte, "Latin Quarter," Gouard. Fox-trot, "Feather Your Nest," Kendis and Brockman. Serenade, "Linchetta," Hartz. Selection, "Irish," Tierney. "Florida Blues," Eustace. "Extase," Ganne. One-step, "Avalon," Jolson.

Leave to Attend

U. D. C. Convention.

Mrs. Frank Harrell, of Americus, president of the Georgia division, and Mrs. Walker Scott Coleman, vice president of the Georgia division, have arranged a grand night for Asheville, N. C., to attend the annual session of the General U. D. C. Mrs. Coleman is a member of the executive board.

Week-End

At the Clubs.

The week-end dinner-dances at clubs were happy events, these entertainments at Capital City, Piedmont Driving club and East Lake Country club.

At the Capital City Club there was a large company. Among those entertainers were Mr. Bert Lumkin, Miss Carrie Dell Cannon, Mr. G. R. Morris and Mr. H. C. Watkins.

The dinner-dance at the Driving club was a happy occasion on Saturday night, with those attending being Colonels and Mrs. B. M. Bailey, whose party was a compliment to Mrs. John Jewell of Smyrna, Ga. The guests of Miss Molina Campbell. Other performers were: Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Spalding, Mr. and Mrs. Gus Dodd, Miss Catherine Dickey, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Orme, Mr. Herman Riddell and Mrs. Bobbie Martin.

Wearing of Poppies

On Armistice Day.

A number of Atlanta's leading ladies have secured supplies of poppies to meet the demand anticipated by the promotion of the movement for the wearing of red poppies on Armistice day.

Mrs. Robert Alston's committee acting under appointment from the president of the City Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. Ethel Lumkin, urges that this appropriate observance of the day that commemorates the sacrifice of those who lie under the poppies of Flanders field be observed generally and that every man, woman and child in Atlanta on Thursday wear a red poppy, especially at the community picnic.

Mrs. Alston announces that these poppies will be had in various parts of town, and that it is hoped that the stores will be ordered to have them for this patriotic occasion will be sold out. They can be purchased at Chamberlain Johnson & DuBose Co., Marion, Mo., 1000 Peachtree Street, Atlanta. Floral company on South Broad street and Cole Book company on Whitehall street.

Social Activities

At Camp Gordon.

A dinner party commemorating its organization day, given by the officers of the Sixth Infantry at the Officers' Club, Thursday evening, was one of the most enjoyable socials that has recently broken the monotony of camp life. Promptly at 6 o'clock in the evening, a splendidly decorated mess hall of the regimental mess, the twenty officers and their families, with nearly a dozen former officers of the regiment were seated and the service consisted of a seven-course dinner, the menu being prepared under the direction of the regimental mess officer, Lieutenant Burrowes. Music for the occasion was rendered by the Sixth Infantry orchestra. Several impromptu toasts followed and the occasion was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

Those present were: Colonel Hunter B. Nelson and daughter, Miss Hazel Nelson, named by Mrs. Hazel Nelson, mother of Mrs. B. M. Bailey, received from the soldiers and sponsored the dance, music being furnished by the Sixth Infantry orchestra. The hostess was dressed with the regimental colors, the flags and trophies being displayed, and the affair was attended by many former members of the organization, and practically every soldier in camp was invited to attend.

At 10 o'clock the dancing was halted and the guests marched into the spacious mess hall dining room, where a delightful refreshment course, consisting of two kinds of sandwiches, ice cream and cake, was served. The service being prepared for four hundred persons. Those largely responsible for the success of the socials were: Colonel and Mrs. Hunter B. Nelson, Miss Hazel Nelson, Mrs. Neelin, Miss Hazel Evans.

Georgia Business Women
Planning Many Activities

Postponement.

The regular meeting of the Catholic Club of Business and Professional Women, which was to be held Tuesday evening, is postponed and the date will be announced later.

Allah Wes Tee Dance.

The Allah Wes Tee club will entertain its members and their friends on November 11, at its clubrooms, the Virginian hall, corner of Gordon and Lee streets. Dancing from 8:30 to 11:15 o'clock.

Writers' Club to Meet.

The Atlanta Writers' club has called a special meeting for Monday afternoon, November 8, at 4 o'clock in the pine room of the American Legion hall, 100 Peachtree and Mulclic, the Immortal Hindu poet and literary critic, who has been in Atlanta several days lecturing to the Drama Club.

Cordial invitation is extended by the Writers' club to their friends to attend, especially the officers and members of the Drama Club and the Reviewers' club, who have recently been studying India, and any other friends who are interested.

Other program will be a vocal selection by a local artist.

Birthday Party.

One of the prettiest affairs of the week will be the birthday party of Miss Huff C. W., entertainment in honor of her little daughter, Minnie Lois, at her home on Adair street.

Legislation.

The board has passed a resolution commanding the action of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs in their decision to form out of the legislative committees of the individual clubs a state-wide state council for more direct action, especially looking to such immediate purposes as the removal of women's civil disabilities, and the board will present a bill to the legislature on behalf of business and professional women.

A resolution was passed calling the attention of the state to the constructive work of the state board of public welfare, and urging on the governor and the legislature that they and the welfare board support it asks to continue the work already begun.

Miss Akin announced that a budget system will be adopted on November 11, at its clubrooms, corner of Gordon and Lee streets, from 8:30 to 11:15 o'clock.

The invitation of the Georgia Federation of Business and Professional Women, which the 1921 convention held in Savannah, was read and cordially accepted.

The Independent Woman.

General interest in the national campaign for women's suffrage, according to the individual clubs, is due to the broadening of the federation movement, the establishment of new clubs and the renewal of inspiration among those which have lagged in their activities this promotion to include personal visitations from the state president or such substitute as she shall appoint.

To meet the necessary expenses, the clubs decided to urge upon the individual clubs the observance of the constitution, which will be reported at the next board meeting, just before the state convention in May.

The invitation of the Georgia Federation of Business and Professional Women, which the 1921 convention held in Savannah, was read and cordially accepted.

Musical for East Lake School.

The music committee of the East Lake Parent-Teacher Association have made arrangements for a concert to be held in the East Lake clubhouse on Tuesday evening, November 22.

Several prominent musicians have promised their assistance. Among them are the following well-known to Atlanta music lovers: Mrs. Nellie H. Nix, Edwards, Irene Whiteman, Eddie Beyer, Some of the dancing pupils of Mrs. W. C. Springer will also assist. Tickets can be obtained from any of the members for 50 cents.

The proceeds are to be used to purchase a piano for the use of the school.

Playroom Reception To Delegates.

A lovely event of the club convention program was the reception held at the home of Mrs. Roberta Hodges on Wednesday afternoon for delegates interested in civic and community work.

Decorated with the happy voices of children, the playroom offered the best possible proof of the necessity of such a feature of modern day life.

Entertaining Mrs. Newton C. Wing, home economics chairman, in entertainments were the playroom co-chairs, Mrs. Frank A. Brodgon and Mrs. Jerome Jones, Victor Krieshaber, J. A. Carlisle, Joseph Heard, Ernest Covington, H. C. Barnes, W. F. Melton, H. E. Judge, Charles Goodwin, Mrs. Oldham, E. B. Havis, F. B. Ramsey and R. F. Ulmer.

The delicious Home Economics punch and dainties were served over at the punch tables presided over by Mrs. B. W. Ramey and Mrs. B. F. Ulmer.

Busy notebooks and pencil testified to the desire of the delegates to get information necessary to start playrooms in Augusta, Savannah, Macon, Columbus, Athens, Rome and other Georgia places.

Miscellaneous Shower.

Mrs. Evelyn Butler gave Mrs. Dewey H. Ward, formerly Miss Irene Whitley, a surprise shower Thursday evening.

Other invited guests were Misses Sarah Lackey, Jewel Payne, Clara Burch, Sanny Todd, Florence Butler, Nellie Butler, Mary Calloway, Elizabeth Boozell, Mary Louise Whitley, Rose Ferguson, Cicely Whitley, Mrs. Paul Harris, Mrs. John A. Basmazian and Mrs. Gordon Stickle.

Atlanta Chapter, O. E. S.

A regular meeting of the Atlanta chapter, No. 57, O. E. S. will be held at the home of Mrs. John R. King, room, corner Lee and Gordon streets, West End, beginning at 6:30 o'clock Friday, November 12.

The business session will be followed by a district convention which will install their officers for the ensuing year. Mr. F. M. Dubney, grand matron of the state, will hold a memorial

Masquerade Party.

An interesting event of the week was the masquerade party given by Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Apperson at the Danforth tea room on Thursday evening, November 12.

The object of the luncheons is to provide an opportunity for women from all parts of the city to meet and discuss with their friends.

"At once" is the time to do it—either two new garments or, if preferred, the money to buy them. Donations of garments may be sent to any officer: Mrs. Arnold Broyles, Mrs. George L. Bell, Mrs. F. P. Perkins, Mrs. M. L. Carson, Mrs. Smith, W. B. Price-Smith, Miss Ethel Williams.

Mrs. Mills was assisted in entertaining by Mrs. J. S. Nunnally, and served a delicious luncheon, including a toilet of black satin charmeuse.

The guests included Mesdames M. E. Simms, Charles Bailey, S. C. Little, Mrs. A. Cason, Oscar Gower, N. B. Dumas, John D. Evans, E. E. Love, John Bonar, White, J. A. Stoney, Charles Huff, M. L. and Misses Emma Griffin and Marjorie Dickey.

Needlework Guild To Collect Garments.

Section presidents, directors and all garment members of the Needlework guild are urged to bear in mind the date for the annual fall meeting, November 29, and to begin this work at once—the week—so that they may be ready in time.

The local leaders have been appointed to take the place of those who had to resign. They are Mrs. H. A. Smith, in the second ward; Mrs. T. D. Dickey, in the fifth ward; and Mrs. W. T. Mooney, in the seventh ward.

A series of luncheons is to be held at the Danforth tea room on Thursday evenings in November. The object of the luncheons is to provide an opportunity for women from all parts of the city to meet and discuss with their friends.

Club d'Honneur Dance.

A special Arkansas day dance will be given by the Club d'Honneur on Thursday evening, November 11, at their clubrooms, corner Peachtree and Third streets, from 9 to 12 o'clock.

This is to be a special affair in commemoration of that glorious day, when the world peace was restored to a world torn and scarred with the horrors of war. An unusual and interesting patriotic program is being given. The committee in charge of arrangements is Mr. Marvin Waller, Mr. Donald Wright, Mr. Fulton Benson and Mr. Lynn Pelot. All are cordially invited to attend. Further information will kindly communicate with one of the above named gentlemen.

A special seven-piece orchestra will furnish the music for the dancing, and the young ladies of the club will serve refreshments during the evening.

Admission will be 50 cents, and all money received will be given to the Hebrew Orphans' Aid and Temple Sisterhood.

The Hebrew Orphans' Aid and Temple Sisterhood will hold a joint rummage sale Monday, November 8, at 224 Decatur street, between Pratt and Moore streets.

Since admission is by courtesy only, members of the several other clubs are cordially invited to attend. All those present will be assured of a most enjoyable evening, full of good times.

Some of the Prettiest Silk Negligees and Breakfast Coats Are Sale Priced!

—You'll love 'em the minute you see 'em! Especially you newly married ladies and you college misses who adore pretties in the way of soft, drapery negligees and crisp taffeta breakfast coats. And what a treat to find such beauties at such little prices.

$16.50 Breakfast Coats Are $11.75

—They're the daintiest ever. Made of fine taffeta with the sweetest little picoted ruffles all around. And the pockets are just bunches of fluffy ruffling! They're in two-tone effects, changeable colors of Nile green, peacock blue, salmon, lavender, tan and pink. These have been reduced from our own stock of breakfast coats at $16.50.

$30 Negligees Are $19.75

—Thirty of them. A special purchase from a manufacturer who knows how to make adorable negligees. They're in combinations of Georgette and crepe de chine in pastel colors such as blue, pink, yellow and salmon. Prettified with hand embroidery, silk tassels and ribbons in contrasting colors. Most of them have accordion pleated skirts with Georgette jackets.

—They're lovely—every last one of them. If you've been wanting a pretty new breakfast coat or negligee, this is your opportunity!

Have You Ever Tried Rich's Beauty Parlors?

—It's so convenient to phone in and make an appointment just before you go shopping, for a manicure or a shampoo. And it's a pleasant break in your shopping routine to come to our restful parlors on the Third Floor and give yourself up to one of the competent operators you'll find there.

—But Rich's Beauty Parlor service doesn't end with manuring and shampooing—oh, dear, no! You can get scalp or facial treatments, marcel waving, henna work, eyebrow shaping and the like, just as competently done as you can anywhere.

—Then, too, you'll find a splendid stock of high grade hair goods in the Beauty Parlors in shades that match yours exactly. Here are two Sales scheduled for tomorrow, just to show you:

Hair Switches—Sale at $2.98

Hair Nets $1.25 and $1.35 Doz.

—Mounted on three separate stems. Made of long human hair. In all shades, including gray. These switches are 20 to 26 inches in length, and you can see that they're unusually little priced at $2.98!

These are on Sale both in the Beauty Parlors, Third Floor, and on the Main Floor

Thank an Unusually Warm Fall for the Low Prices on These Beautiful Winter Coats

—There were just a few days in the fall that were really cold enough for a woman to want a coat. What happened? Manufacturers were left with immense made-up stocks and their factories were producing all the time. No buyers appeared. The situation grew worse instead of better. Something had to be done. What? Selling out for what they could get seemed the only solution. And that's what they did. It's the only reason these warm winter coats that are both new and beautiful come to you at such unusually low prices!

$40 and $45 Coats, $29.85

These are of velour and silver-velvet in a variety of belted and blouse styles. Some have convertible collars of self material, some have fur collars. They're in brown, taupe, gray and navy blue.

$50 to $60 Coats, $37.85

Coats of velour, silver-velvet and silver-velvet. In pretty belted and wrap styles. Most of them are fur collared. And they're lined with pretty printed silks. In a good range of colors.

$69.50 to $75 Coats, $48.85

They're of Bolivia, velour and silver-velvet. In becoming loose fitting wrap styles and capay effects. There are belted models, too. Trimmed with raccoon, Australian opossum, seal and nutria.

$89.50 to $110 Coats, $69.95

Of Bolivia and silver-velvet. In a number of pretty belted models and wrap styles. They're lined with fine printed silks. In a good variety of fashionable colors. Some of them have fine fur collars.

$115 to $135 Coats, $79.95

$137.50 to $150 Coats, $84.95

Of Bolivia, veldyne, velour and silver-velvet. Beautifully made in belted styles and loose capay effects. Some have huge collars of self material; some have collars of fine fur. In the wanted colors.

$155 to $175 Coats, $119.95

Of Bolivia, evora, veldyne, orlando, etc. Most of them have handsome collars and cuffs of fine furs—squirrel, beaver and seal. Made in lovely loose fitting and wrap styles. Richly lined.

Up to $197.50 Coats, $129.95

In the season's finest materials—corduroy, marvella and veldyne. In belted and loose, enveloping styles. Trimmed with beautiful furs. Lined with rich silks, and in the season's favorite colors.

Fine Silk Petticoats Repriced $6.98

—One hundred petticoats just taken out of our stock and marked down. All bear the trade-mark of a famous maker—a brand which is the backbone of our petticoat stock.

—All taffeta, all-silk Jersey and silk Jersey petticoats with taffeta flounces. Come in navy, green, brown, taupe, rose, changeable colors and black.

—Up to this time, these petticoats were $8.50 to $11.50. Sure they're fine investments at $6.98—and one look at them will be enough for you to know it! You'll find them in the Petticoat Section, Second Floor, near the blouses.

Women Kept Insisting and as We Were Able to Get Another Lot of 200 Dozen, Here's

Another Sale of Silk Stockings at $2.85

—Remember the Sale at $2.85 held on October 20th? Scores and scores of women came in after the Sale was over and were disappointed because there were no stockings to be had.

—But we've been negotiating with the manufacturers—finally got them to let us have 200 dozen pairs more to sell at the same low price—$2.85. And

Knowing that thousands of Atlanta women know how good these silk stockings are, it wouldn't surprise us a bit to see them all sold by Monday night!

—Perfect, full-fashioned stockings of pure thread silk—thread silk from top to bottom. Sheer chiffon weight, medium weight and extra heavy weight. Come in black, white, brown, chestnut, gold, silver and beaver. Sizes 8 1/2 to 10. $2.85 pair.

These Are $4, $4.50, $5 and $6 Stockings!

Women's Lodges to Hold State Meeting in Atlanta.

Many visitors are expected to attend the Georgia state union meeting of the ladies' auxiliary to the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, which is to be held in this city on Wednesday, November 10, 1920. This meeting is being held under the auspices of Atlanta Lodge No. 29, Atlanta Lodge, No. 611, and Cherokees Lodge, No. 111, and invitations have been sent out to all lodges in the southern territory.

Mrs. Clara Bradley, grand president of the auxiliary, Mrs. Ada Marshall, first vice president; Mrs. Mary Milton, third vice grand president, and Mrs. Augusta M. Statzer, general secretary and treasurer, are among those who will be in attendance.

The meeting will be held in the Red Men's Hall, and will open at 10 a.m. At noon a grand dinner officers and visitors will be tendered a luncheon, after which the work of the auxiliary will be examined by the three Atlanta lodges. A large class of candidates will be initiated.

In the evening a reception and ball will be given by Mrs. G. N. Gowan and Mr. C. F. Allen, president of Georgia Lodge, No. 866. B. of R. T. has been chosen master of ceremonies. All members of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and their wives are most cordially invited to attend.

Armistice Day at East Lake.

Through the combined efforts of the citizenship committee of East Lake and the teachers of the school a memorial service is being arranged. The service and the service will begin promptly at 8:30 o'clock in the morning, November 11, at the school house. If the day is bright the service will be conducted in the lawn. Rev. Robert McElhenny will open the ceremony with prayer, followed by the flag-raising addresses from Mr. W. F. Thomas, mayor of East Lake, and Mr. Davidson, Boy Scout master, appropriate recitations from the children and community singing. The service will probably cover an hour and the meeting will be adjourned to postpone their business for that hour and take part in this affair. It should be a day of love, appreciation of those who work for us "Sleep in Flanders Fields." Let every man, woman and child residing in East Lake be present at this ceremony.

Miss Landers Entertains.

A very enjoyable affair of the week was a party given by Miss Minnie Landers in honor of her cousin, Miss Hattie Landers, of Clarksville, Ga.

The house was beautifully decorated in autumn leaves and Hallows' eve motifs. Refreshments were enjoyed and refreshments were served. Mrs. T. S. Narins assisted Mrs. Landers in serving punch. The guests were Mrs. Mrs. Pierce, Mrs. Blair, Mrs. Upchurch, Miss Hattie Landers, Miss Nellie McRae, Mrs. Billie Carr, Miss Ethel McCurry, Miss Ellen Carton, Miss Clara McCurry, Miss Marion, Miss Pauline, Miss Stella, Miss Minnie Landers, Mr. Steel, Mr. Upchurch, Mr. Hill, Mr. Pierce, Mr. Henry White, Mr. Ben White, Mr. Landers, Mr. Clark, and Carr.

Woman's Union.

The Woman's Union of the Universalist-Unitarian church will meet at Mrs. J. P. Faulkner's next Tuesday, November 9, at 11 a.m. 1176 Peachtree, Atlanta. Members will bring box lunches. Mrs. Keim will give an informal talk on the Japanese way of arranging flowers. Mrs. Keim was an expert artist of art life in Japan for eleven years.

Mrs. Faulkner will illustrate with various pictures the racial characteristics expressed in the folk songs of the negro and the Indian.

Evening Party.

A delightful evening of Monday evening with the Hallowe'en party given by Miss Pauline Brook and Miss Lillian Stanton at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Brook on Highland avenue.

How to Bring Out Your Hidden Beauty

Beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or stained surface our fair to look upon. Mercurox will gradually, gently absorb the discolored surface skin, revealing the youthful, fresh, white and beautiful skin underneath. Used by refined women who are particular in their cosmetics. Mercurox wax is one-ounce package, with directions for use, is sold by all druggists, —adv.

REMARKABLE RECOVERY

Due to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I want to let you know what good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me. I had organic troubles and I am so glad I took the Change of Life. I was taken with a pain in my side and a bad headache. I could not lie down, could not eat or sleep.

I suffered something terrible and the doctor's medicine did me no good at all—my pains got worse instead of better. I began taking the Vegetable Compound and felt a change from the first. Now I feel fine and advise any one going through the Change of Life to try it, for it cured me after I had given up all hopes of getting better. You can publish this and I will tell any one who writes to me the girl it has done me."—Mrs. MARGARET DAVIS, 743 N. 25th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

It hardly seems possible that there is a woman in this country who will continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial after all the evidence that is continually being published, proving beyond contradiction that this grand old medicine has relieved many suffering women.

George Meyers, Charles Butler and Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Brook.

Mrs. Avis Brook, Mrs. J. V. Hodges, Mrs. D. C. Wall and Mrs. H. D. Brook assisted in entertainment.

Honoring Bride-Elect.

Mrs. H. B. Shannon and Miss Mitie Caldwell, of East Point, were joint hostesses yesterday afternoon from 3:30 to 6 o'clock at a dinner given in honor of Miss Charlotte Malone, whose marriage to Dr. J. C. Hind, of Albany, Ga., will be an interesting event of the 24th. The house was prettily in its decorations, the color scheme being pink and white.

The presents were so arranged that each table had a large and representative immense wedding cake and were drawn piece by piece by the bride-elect.

Dainty refreshments were served to twenty-five guests.

Birthday Dinner.

A pleasant occasion of Monday evening, November 1, was the dinner party given by Mrs. G. N. Owens in honor of her husband, whose birthday it was.

The home was bright with autumn flowers, and the dining table had at its central decorations a beautiful blue cake, lighted with burning candles.

Thirty-five guests were entertained and the occasion was a complete surprise to the honor guest.

Elizabeth Mather News.

Many students and nearly every member of the faculty attended the two concerts at the Auditorium this week. President Loveridge presided in his usual way, paying attention to the artistic work of Miss Maitzenauer on Tuesday morning at assembly.

A great deal of interest was created among the students over election returns. Effort is being made at assembly to awaken the girls to the obligations which rest upon them as future voters.

Wednesday evening a delightful recital given by the Conservatory of Music and especially the exercises of Miss Marie van Gelder which greatly interested the girls. They enjoy especially the compositions of Miss Marie van Gelder which are sung from time to time. Wednesday evening, Miss Kira Land sang "Miss van Gelder's 'Forest Fairy,'" a composition which has been in print a long time.

More of the Season's Vaudeville Hits

Star acts coming to Loew's Grand this season: (1) The Three Latour Sisters; (2) Nazimova in feature film; (3) Mlle. Victrola; (4) Nancy Boyer in "Mary Lou"; (5) Nellie Dayton; (6) Girls with "Buzzin' Around"; (7) Carol Woolsey; (8) Elsie Harvey and George Stifter.

SELECTION of Atlanta as southern headquarters by leading vaudeville and motion picture interests has naturally resulted in bringing to this city the cream of these attractions. A large factor in this development came when Marcus Loew picked Atlanta for the central point of his southern interests, with Ed Schiller in charge, and took over the Grand here as the hub for his many other theaters throughout Dixie.

As the Loew circuit and affiliated theaters now number over three hundred in the leading cities of America, it naturally follows that the best in vaudeville and pictures can be shown here. As a consequence of this steady extension, Manager Schiller announces that the present season at the Grand will be a record one. A few of the season's star acts are shown on this page.

Among the Loew Metro super pictures to come to the Grand are included "The Hope," with an all-star cast, including Ruth Stonehouse, Jack Mulhall, and Marguerite de la Motte; Hayakawa in "An Arabian Knight"; Bert Lytell in "The Price of Redemption"; Elsie Janis in her auspicious screen appearance, "The Imp"; "Clothes," a Loew-Metro special with a gorgeous display of gowns, and "Love, Honor and Obey."

Exceptional vaudeville acts have been booked for early appearance and every vaudeville bill will carry at least one act of exceptional nature in addition to the usual acts of all-star vaudeville. The addition of so many theaters to the circuit has placed Mr. Loew in the position where he can offer an act two solid years of work with a minimum of layoffs and lost time.

DID YOU KNOW THAT?

ARCHITECTURAL DRAFTSMAN PREPARING PLANS FOR IMMENSE BALLROOM SET

DECORATIVE ARTIST LAYING OUT DESIGNS TO BE USED IN NEW ETHEL CLAYTON PRODUCTION

WILFRED BUCKLAND ART DIRECTOR EXAMINING SAMPLE OF A PILLAR

Did you know that—the movies build stairs to fit actors? at fifteen feet from the camera an actor six feet high would have his head cut off?—a picture of a yardstick makes possible the exact duplication of any building in the world?

No? Then to you much of the screen's Wonderland is still a closed book. You admire your favorite actor or actress—but do you realize that "a power behind the throne" makes possible the perfection of face, form and action to your eyes?

The questions listed above indicate some of the interesting things you have yet to learn, but here . . .

For a long time I had sensed the vast amount of careful, painstaking preparation that lay behind the modern high-class motion picture. Each succeeding movie unfolded some new evidence of art, inspirational and creative, combined to make important scenes stand out with maximum effect.

One day an assignment came, "Go get a story on the work of Movie Art Departments."

Leaving Los Angeles, a fast electric car carried me in 25 minutes to Vine street, Hollywood. A walk of a block under shading pepper trees brought me to an immense movie plant.

Has a Big Detail.

It took some talking to convince the female Cerberus at the gate that I was perfectly all right—but in a few minutes I was past the portals and traversing the four immense stages to the huge laboratory building on the third floor of which Wilfred Buckland is "Lord of all he surveys." Mr. Buckland is an art director and as such controls half a thousand artists, architects, painters, carpenters and interior decorators, the artistic working force of the plant.

I had been told, you see, "Buckland is the man to tell you what you want to know."

And even before I met him I was convinced of that! For the department over which he rules amazes one with its throngs of busy architects, artists, designers and decorators. Room, after room, all roofed with a big skylight which allows a maximum amount of light, cases filled with thousands of classified pictures from all parts of the world, and everywhere an air of concentrated effort towards an artistic end.

Way over in a corner of this maze we found Mr. Buckland's office, a curious combination of the artistic and the practical. For tubes of artist's colors, drawing pencils and an easel vied with business-looking filing cases and a very big and ferocious pencil-sharpener!

Building the Right Set.

Wilfred Buckland reflects the same combination. The well-shaped head of an astute business man bears two eyes that gaze out with the dreamy introspection of the artist. Decidedly it was to be an interesting interview!

"What is the process of preparing sets for motion pictures, Mr. Buckland?" I asked.

"Here is the beginning," was the answer and he handed over for our inspection the huge script of a new picture. (It was, by the Way, that of "The Charm School," which is being done by Wallace Reid from the Saturday Evening Post story by Alice Duer Miller.)

"I study this thoroughly before even starting plans. For you see we must make our set subordinate to the situation. If stairs are used they must fit the actors."

RIGHT—FILE ROOM WHERE PLANS ARE KEPT FROM EARLIEST DAYS OF THE MOVIES

Ah!

"For instance, if the story calls for the hero to rush up quickly as his lady love comes down a staircase, there to whisper sweet nothings in her ear—we must be sure that the landing is well to the front of the set—not in the rear where the faces are small and indistinct.

"To the same extent we must often build an entire set so that a chair or table will be in a certain position required by the section. Even the wallpaper and rear decorations must be studied so that the players contrast or blend as it is desired to soften or accentuate their action."

"But here—let's show you the process first."

He went over to a big cabinet and took down a large folder, one of many marked with such titles as "French Cathedrals," "English Country Homes," "General Store and Other Country Buildings," "Brickyards," "Cotton Factories," "Venetian Palaces,"—and a score more equally varied.

"Thousands of clippings from trade, art and popular magazines all over the world guide us in getting accurate details. This, of course, is for things of a foreign nature, not up to date or unavailable in the vicinity of Los Angeles.

"Many of our productions, however, are entirely modern. We have special men covering the country in machines to find "locations," houses, buildings, etc., fitted for us."

Use the Yard Stick.

"Often when action takes place around a door, window or entrance to a store is inconvenient to take the entire company to the place where perhaps the lighting is poor. So the "location" man photographs the desired doorway, shall we say, first placing a yardstick against it. This photograph is handed to one of the architects here who constructs plans according to exact scale, thanks to the photographed three-foot rule."

Mr. Buckland showed us a young draftsman actually at work according to the above idea. It was almost uncanny to see his reproduction of a place he had never seen. When done it would be, I was assured, so near like the original that even the builder would be hard put to tell the difference.

While doing this I noticed that the draftsman was using a long, triangular celluloid rule, different from anything I had ever seen in strictly architectural use.

"What is this?" said I, demonstrating the fact my feminine readers will

by the camera? And this is exactly what would happen without such a guide, carefully and scientifically prepared to fit in exactly with the lens possibilities of the average motion picture camera.

For instance at ten feet from the camera clear focus is possible on objects 3.8 feet high by a space 4.6 wide. This is about the scale used for close-ups.

Working Out the Details.

"After all this is done," continued Mr. Buckland, "We get down to the details of a set. I have a conference with our decorators and we plan the 'dressing' of the scene, wall paper, furniture, flowers, etc."

"Here" he said, "We come face to face with another problem which is altogether peculiar to the pictures. As you see a photoplay on the screen all colors resolve into black and white or their gradations. Therefore when a set is prepared we must look at the wall paper and hangings to be used through a "screen filter" of specially prepared blue glass. This brings the colors to their black and white values. And also it enables us to tell the directors how to dress their people so that the principals will stand out against the background!"

"We have a corps of decorators who have been trained in our requirements and have become very expert in the work. So wide is the range of decoration in motion pictures that when there is a call for some one to take up the work in a commercial way the man or woman with our training is in a position to undertake really big things. Many of the interior artists now taking million dollar contracts in New York and Los Angeles are graduates of the Motion Picture Art Department."

The Power of Suggestion.

"Even to moldings must we carry our careful search for the right thing. In the department we have samples of a hundred different kinds. Because of the shadows they cast it is important that care be used in their choice."

Now that we had reached the end of our convention, it occurred to me to ask a question I know has long been in the minds of many of my readers.

"Do you 'fake' much in preparing your scenes?" I asked Mr. Buckland.

"If you mean cheap, tawdry substitutions, no," was the reply. "Long ago we learned that the camera is very sharp-eyed and that a deviation from the 'real thing' is quickly exposed. We must have real Chippendale furniture, real cloisonne vases, real Dresden china and many things equally 'real.'"

"There is, however, an extent to which we do fake, if you care to call it that. We often suggest things in a scene without actually showing them."

"An excellent example of this occurred in 'The Flirt Girl' in which we showed typical South African scenes, both exterior and interior. A former resident of that colony wrote to me to congratulate me on the closeness with which I had adhered to real life. 'Why,' he wrote, 'The Colonial's house was wonderful. There was the battery of guns, just as we used to have them. There were the old Dutch 'chromos,' the only pictures we could buy. And on the table—why there was a bottle of Guinness' stout and real old South African steins!'

The reference to guns effects this account. There wasn't a rifle on the set! We couldn't get the proper pieces—so we built a rack—and then placed it in the shadow so the suggestion of guns was there—but not the reality. This Englishman was so impressed by the things which did reflect South African life—that his mind's-eye saw in the scenes more than was actually present!"

A Man of a Thousand Costumes

By THEODORE ROBERTS

Something old and something new, something borrowed—something blue." T HEODORE ROBERTS repeated this little couplet and smiled—a reminiscent smile that lighted every line of his kindly face which in its time has portrayed a thousand characters on stage and screen.

"If I have any superstitions," he said, "it is embodied in that verse which brides from time immemorial have carried out in their wedding attire."

He laughed—"Not that I put myself in the bridal class, I'm afraid my whiskers bar me from that! But it is a fact that I never take a character in a new play without wearing some portion of a costume which had brought me success previously. For that reason I have never thrown away a single costume. In 40 years my accumulation has gone up into the hundreds and my wife kicks because the 12 trunks in which they are stored have crowded everything else out of the attic!"

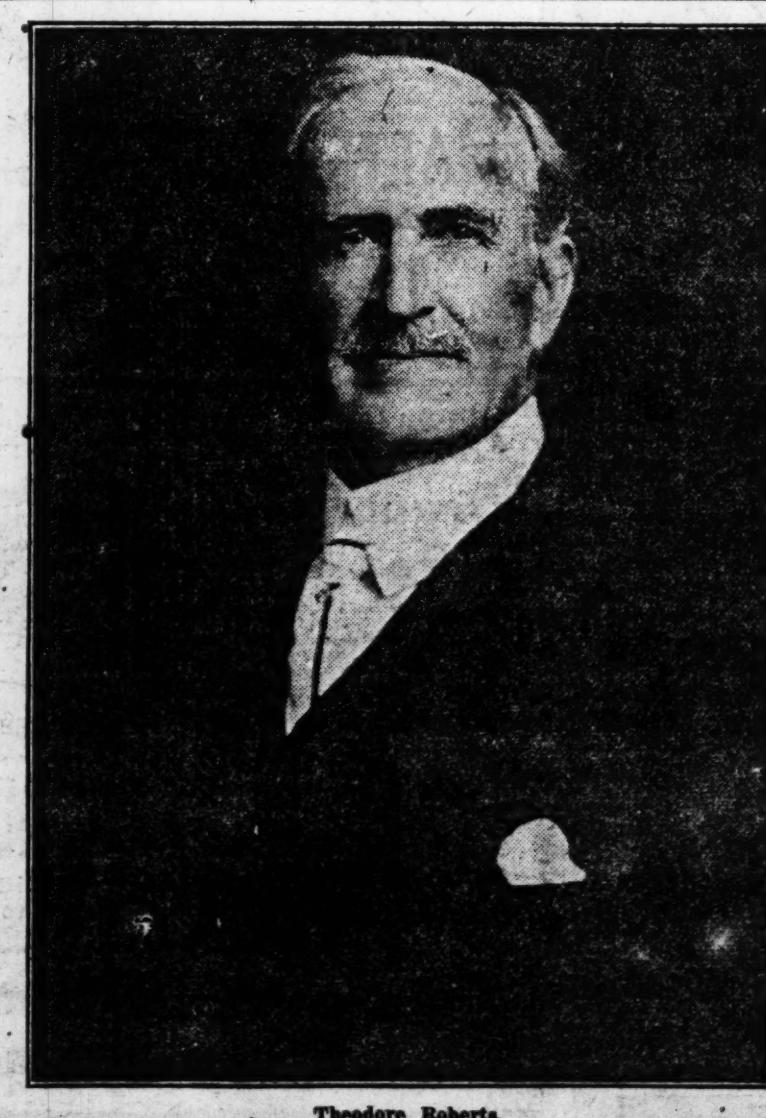

Plenty of Costumes.

Hundreds of costumes! Twelve trunks! What a story must lie in this collection of the man who is considered by many people to be the world's greatest character actor!

But here, Mr. Roberts wants to finish the story of his superstition:

"Do you remember my characterization as Portugal in 'The Right of Way'?"

"I study this thoroughly before even starting plans. For you see we must make our set subordinate to the situ-

Theodore Roberts.

terly picture of the French Canadian bully, a classic of the stage for years?"

"I have worn parts of that outfit in scores of pictures," said Mr. Roberts. "Despite the fact the suit is getting very, very old. I have patched it time and time again to keep 'her luck' in."

I used the trousers and boots in 'Call of the North,' the trousers as 'Bummer Smith' with Mary Pickford in 'M'iss,' and the shirt in 'Something to Think About,' a Cecil B. DeMille production."

The old gentleman chuckled.

"That shirt is worth a story alone. It is a peculiar Guernsey worn by Scotch and French sailors and fishermen. But now-a-days it is just a bit obsolete and they are hard to find. I hunted high and low over the Montreal wharves until finally I found an old fellow with one rather torn, but what I wanted. He looked at me, as if I were crazy when I offered to buy him a new $7.00 sweater for it—but I got the shirt."

"But even that hardly ranks as my most interesting experience in costume collecting. Stripping an Indian to the skin probably takes the cake!"

"Poor Leo" Goes Home in a Blanket.

"I needed an Indian costume in Chicago one time. Old Doctor Walker, a showman all the old-timers remember, had a bunch of Sioux on exhibition, direct from the reservation.

They only had their battle clothes with them. I offered one buck $100 for his outfit and he peeled.

"Afterwards I had to hide the set for Walker chased all over town trying to get it. And to cap the climax the Indian left the theater, clad only in a blanket, got drunk on my hundred and was pinched for vagrancy!

"Sometimes this costume hunting is accompanied with considerable expense. I found a pair of lumberjack shoes in a Quebec 'slop shop' for $3.00—but they were too small. It cost me over $35 to have them duplicated in New York—patches, cuts and all.

"You must understand," said Mr. Roberts, "that hunting costumes is simultaneous with hunting a character in real life I want to interpret on the stage. I find the man, study his characteristics—and then buy his clothes."

Duplicating a Head of Hair.

"Sometimes the costume is attached to the man and I can't buy it—What!"

". . . so I had the man take his head of hair to a wig-maker who copied it. Five hundred dollars was the price for the pose."

"Here"—Mr. Roberts stopped short. "You've let me ramble on in a terrible fashion young man."

But we were satisfied. For we had gained the real, genial Theodore Roberts, just as he is to his friends and intimates.

Theodore Roberts, whether it be king, longshoreman, bishop, rake, drunkard, or benign old grandpere, this master of acting technique never fails to delight those who revel in his droll characterizations.

He uses "Something Old and Something New" in his costumes to bring him luck.

May the talisman never fail him—Barrett C. Kiesling.

'The Stealers' Comes to Rialto for Week

is Powerful Drama of Crook Life, With Stirring Climax.

"The Stealers," William Christy Cabanne's powerful drama of crook life, will be the feature attraction at the Rialto this week, marking one of the biggest productions that will be seen upon a local screen.

Now since "The Birth of a Nation" has such a stupendous photoplay been filmed in many of the great studios, 4,000 actors take part, and several of the outdoor sets cost many thousands of dollars.

William Christy Cabanne conceived, wrote, directed and produced "The Stealers." The work is the culmination of Mr. Cabanne's years of experience in the art of silent drama.

It was this experience which prompted Mr. Cabanne to make the central theme of his masterful picture, "Bible" faith in the certainty that the right always prevails over the forces of evil, and that the justice meted out by the Supreme Being is felt on earth with waiting for the judgments of that other world of which Christianity preaches.

The story deals with the blasphemous conduct of a minister of the gospel who turned crook to spite God for the suffering he caused him. His wife, alienated from him by a former rival, he gives up his church and becomes a wandering evangelist, speaking they regard as unclean.

wherever he is permitted to pitch his tent. While he holds the audience through the sheer power of his acting, he steals the world confederates move among the worshippers, separating them from their cash and jewelry.

The minister regarded his plan of vengeance a great joke on God. How he came to learn that to defy God was beyond the puny power of one of the earthly passions and his faith overcame the dramatic and sensational climax never to be forgotten once it has been seen.

"The Stealers" is one picture in a thousand. It is a picture which will live because it deals with the humanities with love, honor, adventure and the perennial appeal of the infinite.

As a special added attraction to the big feature, the management of the Rialto will present a Fox Sunshine comedy, "His Noisy Still," one of the funniest burlesques on the prohibition question ever filmed.

The current edition of the Paramount Magazine will also be shown and the Rialto orchestra has arranged a special score incidental to the action of the pictures.

Morose in Pictures.

Oliver Morosco, Los Angeles and New York, the noted producer, will again engage in the production of motion pictures. He will begin the filming of "The Half Breed" in Los Angeles, and will work with William Desmond, who created the principal male role in "The Half Breed," will portray the same character for the screen.

PICTURE ATTRACTION AT GRAND, 'THE HOPE'

Is Feature of Spectacular Appeal and Many Big Scenes.

A super-feature comparable in spectacular appeal to famous old thrillers like "The Whip," "Sporting Life" and other great London melodramas, has been booked as the unusual attraction for the picture program at Loew's Grand du "The opening half of the week."

The Hope, a special Loew-Metropolitan production, featuring distinguished all-star cast, is the motion picture sensation offered Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday in connection with a splendid bill of vaudeville acts.

"The Hope" was written for the sole purpose of thrilling. It was an enormous success in dealing on the stage both in Europe and America and reports of its film version declare that it stands as one of the most impressive dramas yet screened.

"The Hope" tells a tale of love, romance, adventure, mishaps, scheming villains, gallant heroes, scheming heroines, and the like, while the plot works in cyclonic upheavals in all parts of the world.

MEIGHAN AT STRAND IN "THE PRINCE CHAP"

Famous Story of Artist Life Gives Star an Excellent Part.

Thomas Meighan, one of the most popular stars that has ever appeared upon a local screen is coming to the Strand on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday in his famous story of artist life, "The Prince Chap."

Mr. Meighan will be pleasantly remembered by thousands of picture lovers as the star of such pictures as "Male and Female," "The Miracle Man," "Why Change Your Wife," "Civilian Clothes" and other photoplays. He gave a delightful night of fun to a young woman and she learned to love Peyton.

Finding his heart swept clean of his love for Peyton, he turned to his old flame, Alice, and the full realization of his love for Claudia, now eight years old, learns of her daddy's love for Alice. She becomes jealous. Alice is the mother of Peyton, and Peyton is the father of Claudia. Alice goes to London to learn the truth.

When Peyton arrives, she demands that he sell off his art, but he refuses. He leaves him, crushed, and Claudia comforts him.

Years pass and Peyton lives broken hearted, but Alice, now a pretty young woman and she learned to love Peyton.

News and Features of the Screen and Drama

CONDUCTED BY L. E. WINCHELL

"HALF A CHANCE" IS FEATURE AT TUDOR

Mahlon Hamilton Has Lead-
Production.

Thoughts of the greatest outdoor pictures that have ever been screened, recall the novels of Jack London and Rex Beach, the poetry of Robert Service and "Half a Chance," the thrilling, red-blooded picture which comes to the Tudor theater this week is in that class. It is taking the public by the banks of the unusually gripping and forceful photo-dramas for the present, it's a story of disappointment and defeat when attainment, success, victory and loss, it's a picture full of heart-throbs, with action that stretches from the depths to the heights of the social scale and from the dives and prize rings of the Barbary coast, to a shipwreck in mid-ocean, a lonely island, back to civilization, the law and society life.

"Half a Chance" is the most popular novel of the celebrated author and playright, Fredric S. Isham. It could not fail to enjoy popularity apart from the mass of story of a man who, sunken to the depth, batters his way through almost insurmountable obstacles with a sheer force of endurance, determination and will power.

The role of a man who asked only half chance to make good was one that made many demands on the player. It called for an actor of powerful physique and refinement who could portray both the Barbary coast prize fighter and the cultured and refined man of society and law. There could have been no better selection made than Mahlon Hamilton, the star of "Earthbound," which is playing to capacity at the Tudor. The play is in many of the large eastern and northern cities. Splendid as has been his screen career, his portrayal of Sailor Burke and later of John Stark as a man of means, men, women and children he will be greatly admired in this part.

Lillian Rich, whose delightful acting opposite H. B. Warner, has staged a new, gay and beautiful interpretation to her role in the picture, in which she plays opposite Mr. Hamilton. Sidney Ainsworth, who began his career in Hollywood a year ago, also plays the leading heavy role as villain in real life, that is, he portrays human being. All the other parts are in the hands of competent artists.

Alfred E. Park manifested itself in the staging of "Half a Chance" not alone because of the diversity of the scenes, but because of the unusual character of many of the roles. But the director succeeded, and the result is well worth the effort.

May Allison's
New "Opposite"

Theodore von Eltz, who has been selected to play opposite May Allison in the new screen picture industry. He recently arrived in Hollywood from New York, where he appeared in numerous successful Broadway productions during the few years. Mr. von Eltz made his New York stage debut in "Prunella" six years ago. Since that time he has had important roles in
"The Man," "Makem," "Children of the Earth," the American prize play that had a successful run at the Booth theater; "Pic Grange," August Strindberg's play of the American border, and several other successful stage productions. Mr. von Eltz also has considerable stock experience in the east and west in Denver, where he played for thirty weeks. In "Are Wives to Blame?" he will enact the part of a youthful lawyer who is married to a spendthrift wife, which role Miss Allison will enact.

NAZIMOVA COMES TO THE CRITERION

In "Madame Peacock," Gifted Actress Has Her Greatest Portrayal.

In "Madame Peacock," the picture she herself has declared her greatest since "Revelation," Nasimova will appear before local motion picture audiences all this week at the Criterion theater.

This latest photoplay, from a story by Rita Weimans, will present a brilliant stage celebrity who flies the heights of fame, somehow do not bring the complete happiness she had imagined.

Written by one of the lead-dramatic writers of the day and enacted by undoubtedly the most finished actress in the world, "Madame Peacock" is a masterly and telling portrayal of the soul of a remarkable woman.

At the same time, and later in the story, Nasimova comes to the front in a second character, as Gloria Cromwell, the grifted, non-descript little girl to whom Jane Gering is rather more than a godmother.

Never before has Mme. Nasimova been provided with a story that gave her greater opportunities for displaying her great acting power.
In the dual role of pampered star who thinks only of her own success, then as the gifted but unfortunate girl presented to the public, she makes full use of her regal beauty and her ability to portray a sympathetic part convincingly.

It is the tale of a woman of undisputed genius who, having climbed to the top rung of the ladder of success, finds that there is something else to be attained.

The opportunity to picture this something else is never and touchingly presented to the audience results that can be appreciated only by those who view the finished product.

Picturegoers who have become accustomed to seeing the star supported by the stalwart Charles Bryant, will find her playing with a supporting man of her own ability.

George Probst, who is well known for his portrayal of difficult roles in Mme. Nasimova's production, when plays in New York several years ago, has returned to her once more as head of her supporting company.

Mr. Probst was selected by Mahlon Hamilton for his unquestioned ability in characterization. He will be seen as the neglected husband of the pampered woman supposed to have been
"vamping" his rich and silly younger brother. Of course things happen to the little girl, probably to be the charming heroine. There are interesting interludes taking in a hard-shelled old yacht captain who does not approve of proceedings, a guitar player, a party of the stars and her friends, and a delectable old pair, guardians of the young heiress. Jerome Patrick plays one of the little girl's protectors.

The story is by Alice Duer Miller, author of "The Charm School,"

Ray Smallwood, who has directed Mme. Nasimova in her three preceding productions, also served in that capacity in this picture.

Margaret Loomis' Theory.

"If you would be beautiful on the screen, if you wish to make your acting convincing, if you want to give a faithful picture of a character, live and think beautifully—live and think beautifully."

This is Margaret Loomis' theory about acting, and she ought to know, seeing that she has done many splendid roles as leading woman for stars.

"The Chorus Girl's Romance" will play a three-day engagement at the popular Whitehall street house, beginning Thursday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. As an added attraction to the program, the Alamo will present "Chase Me," a round two-reel affair.

A special photoplay of adventure out-of-doors closes the week's bill at the Alamo. The picture is "The Country God Forgives," an especially attractive production of George Fawcett, famous character actor, and beautiful Mary Charleson heading the cast. A Mutt and Jeff comedy, "The Land of Nodding," and "Screen Snapshots" complete the entertainment for the week-end.

Jokesmith—Yea, sir, I made up all of those jokes out of my head.
Editor—Yes, I could tell you were out of your head when you made them.

Wife—I've been insulted. I was singing a wail a mile ago, and a slipper was thrown through the window.

Husband—Well, sing again dear.
Perhaps the other one will come,
and then you'll have a pair.

appealing feature photoplay booked for patrons of the Alamo theater this week.

Her First Elopement.

"Her First Elopement," Wanda Hawley's newest production, concerns a man who kidnaps a young woman supposed to have been
"vamping" his rich and silly younger brother. Of course things happen to the little girl, probably to be the charming heroine. There are

A Small Town Idol.

"A Small Town Idol" will be the title of Mack Sennett's first Associated Producers' release. For it the biggest set yet built on the Sennett lot in Los Angeles is now under construction.

It will be inhabited briefly by 500 beautiful girls in Oriental costumery. Ben Turpin is the small town hero and he has become a member of motion picture stardom. The star of the show is Marie Prevost. A picture within the picture is the basis for the plot.

In the inset Ben shined and is now a successful man in personal appearance in his home town.

It is asserted that the production will be the most extravagant yet contributed to the silver-sheets by Sen-

Jack Donovan.

Jack Donovan has been signed to play the featured role in a W. W.
Hodgkinson production of Lincoln's "Partners of the Tide." Betty Francisco, who will be opposite William Desmond in "Broadway Cowboy," is the leading woman.

Sure Thing.

Householder—Do you mean to tell me that my gas bill is correct? That we used all that gas?

Gas Company Clerk—I'm not going to argue. All I know is that is the amount you're going to pay for.

A Practical Man.

MARIAM MACDONALD
SISTER TO TWO STARS

The Talmadge sisters are no longer members of a unique screen family. Sister Natalie's studio debut elevated the family to that plane, but now comes Mariam Mac-Donald, sister to two stars, Mary MacLaren and Katherine Macdonald.

As regards the family name this middle sister of the MacDonald trio stands pat with the "American beauty" and will carve out a career under the family name MacDonald.
Mariam has played small parts with Miss MacLaren and has figured in a few scenes in the American beauty's picture, but now she is making on a real screen career and will play with stars other than her sisters.

The newcomer intends to specialize on character work and is now a member of Katherine MacDonald's company in her eighth First National production now being filmed by Director J. A. Barry.

YADEN IS COMING TO EXAMINE P. O.
APPLICANTS HERE

Announcement was made Saturday by Division Secretary Meyer, of the city service, that the J. C. Yaden, chief of the examining division of the commission, will arrive in Atlanta Monday to conduct examinations into the applications of aspirants for post offices in this city. He will be assisted by J. W. Cole, post office inspector in charge of the Chattanooga division. Mr. Cole is already in Atlanta.

Secretary Meyer said that perhaps 50 to 75 business and professional men of Atlanta, who have submitted applications for examinations as to the various qualifications of the applicants. These interviews will be in addition to interviews with parties given by the aspirants as references as to character, ability and integrity.

ATTEMPT TO SOLVE
IN LOCAL COURTS

In an effort to solve the problem of the conflict of cases in the several courts in which the county is retained, William Hewitt, Saturday morning, called a meeting of the Atlanta Bar association at the courthouse.

On behalf of James K. Hines, John Y. Smith, chairman of the meeting, appointed a committee composed of Mr. Jordan, chairman; J. A. Branch, Mr. H. C. Fielder, Mr. Jones and Stiles Hopkins, who will draft a plan whereby the present situation will be remedied and will report back to the next bar meeting.

WOMEN OF AD CLUB TO ORGANIZE DIVISION

Miss Theodora Stansbury, chairman, has called a meeting of the women members of the Advertising Club at the Dafford tomorrow at 7 p. m. to organize a women's division of the Advertising club.

S. C. Davis will be the chief speaker, and D. W. Webb, Frank Lowenstein and Charles Chalmers will also speak on various phases of organization work.

SCHOOLS WILL AID IN CELEBRATION OF ARMISTICE DAY

Community Service Week
To Be Inaugurated at Once

Atlanta public schools will participate in the celebration of Armistice day next Thursday, the high schools taking an active part in the patriotic exercises which will be held at Five Points at noon, while appropriate programs will be conducted at the respective grammar schools.

Superintendent W. F. Dykes announced Saturday that he has notified the principals of the high schools that the student bodies will be permitted to participate in the conclusion of the exercises they will be required to report back to their schools to resume their regular classes. The grammar schools will remain in session.

Georgia Librarians To Hold Conference
In Chattanooga, Tenn.

A number of Atlanta and Georgia librarians will go this week to attend a conference in Chattanooga, Saturday morning, called a meeting of the Atlanta Bar association at the courthouse.

The community service program of the chamber is a radical departure from the usual conception of such service, since its intention, according to those in charge, is to find first the wishes of the various neighborhoods as to the sort of recreation and community work they desire, then assist the community work they desire, then assist the communities in providing it, rather than offering a set program for all sections which may, or may not, please.

High endorsement to the plan of action mapped out by Secretary Charles E. Robertson, of the chamber of commerce, was given Saturday by Burr Blackburn, secretary of the state board of public welfare of Georgia.

Admirable Play.

"The plan is a most admirable one," said Mr. Blackburn, "and is in line with efforts such organizations as ours have been stressing for some time. It is good in that it finds the needs of specific communities rather than depending on generalities. Three separate and distinct needs must be met in every community, although the communities themselves do not often realize their existence. Needs for service must be met to support the preservation of life and health; the fight against want, abuse, and crime; and the attention to recreation and education. The man of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce will serve these needs excellently."

Mr. Robinson, who comes to Atlanta to supervise this new activity of the chamber, was, after the armistice, assigned to take charge of war camp community service organization and the government employed him under contract at Chattanooga, where his work was to assist the soldiers after discharge and their readjustment to civil life. He also assisted in the establishment of a community service program for the city of Chattanooga, in co-operation with the Chattanooga Chamber of Commerce and the Retail Merchants association of that city.

The first activity of the new department of the chamber will be full participation in the celebration of Armistice day, November 11, when the chamber of commerce and other city organizations are co-operating in the ceremonies. A camp will be attended several weeks ago to secure funds to provide for the perpetuation of the community service organization, which did such creditable work here during and immediately after the war, but an apparent public apathy caused the same to be discontinued. The chamber of commerce plan was first conceived by Secretary Charles E. Robertson, and approached by him a number of business leaders in the body, and was later given the official stamp of approval by the board of directors.

Attitude of Chamber.

In explaining the attitude of the chamber toward the new program, Secretary Robertson said:

"Adopting as a basis, the definition of community service, as the community service plan was built upon three principles: First, that civic spirit and a desire to serve one's city is not a matter of class or geography; that is, it is not confined to one class of people or one section of a city; second, that civic or community spirit can only be converted into concrete action through the medium of civic organization; and third, that the chamber of commerce is the logical central organization.

"To many people this may seem a radical departure from the proper functions of a chamber of commerce, but as a matter of fact, it is right in line with the present-day trend of all social organizations."

The Atlanta Chamber of Commerce has for many years been a recognized submarine and defense organization for the upholding of Atlanta. Its officers have been very largely the men who have made Atlanta what it is today. But Atlanta, as every community, there are many citizens capable of real leadership who have no opportunity to express their desire for the city which they would love to perform.

To develop such leaders and encourage all who wish to serve Atlanta to play a real part in her upholding will be a major feature of the new community service program.

"It is not intended to invade the functions of any other organizations now striving to help the city, but to co-operate with them and to do what we can to help them to go much further in a conscientious endeavor to reach the individual citizen and to provide the means by which his individual service linked with the service of many others for the benefit of Atlanta."

The community service program of the chamber is a radical departure from the usual conception of such service, since its intention, according to those in charge, is to find first the wishes of the various neighborhoods as to the sort of recreation and community work they desire, then assist the community work they desire, then assist the communities in providing it, rather than offering a set program for all sections which may, or may not, please.

High endorsement to the plan of action mapped out by Secretary Charles E. Robertson, of the chamber of commerce, was given Saturday by Burr Blackburn, secretary of the state board of public welfare of Georgia.

Admirable Play.

How Well Do You Know the South?

Educational Systems — While the South has developed its commercial side, it has not neglected the things that make for better men and women tomorrow. It has taken high rank in the establishment and maintenance of educational institutions. Atlanta, for illustration, is the home of four large universities, including the famous Georgia Tech, which ranks second only to the Boston Tech. The educational advantages of the South, like The Haverty Stores, are building soundly for the years ahead.

Home Influences

Inseparably interwoven with the accomplishments of coming years is the influence of the home. Environment, not heredity, is the factor that will have greatest weight in determining what your children shall be. Surround them with those things that make for happiness, contentment, refinement, and in their later years will be reflected the marks and indications of worthiness.

Nothing quite so well tests the liveability of any home as does its furnishings. A home may be quietly lovely without extravagance. It can be bright and piquant without false touches. Good furnishings rightly chosen, give permanent value, no matter how modest or how palatial the home may be.

In making more delightful a hundred thousand homes in the South, The Haverty Stores and the service they have been able to offer have been of inestimable value.

Intimacy with and knowledge of the markets of the world; great resources; buying capacity and strength; familiarity with all that is needful to make any home more desirable; an intelligent understanding of the customers' wishes — all these, linked up with a foundation of business integrity, have made The Haverty Stores just what they are today.

No matter what the condition of the markets may be, people know too that at The Haverty Stores may be found always the best values that this organization can command.

These are reasons why your own best interests will be served by coming to these stores. And those reasons can be most surely and completely visualized to you by a single visit to any one or all of The Haverty Stores. That is not a matter of mere statement only, but a matter of fact, as thousands who know us will gladly testify. Whether your home exists in reality or is just an ideal to be realized, you will find in this organization men and women who are most capable in conferring with you and helping you to select those things that make a home, not merely a house.

Keely's Annual Suit Sale A Month Ahead of Time

It is an event of great moment to women when Keely announces the annual clearance of suits which for many years has been held in late December. We have plans that make it advisable to advance the date in this instance---and that is in your favor.

We repeat, it is the "Greatest Suit Sale of the Year," because of the values, the styles---the desirability of the garments. Any woman who is a judge of quality and knows what is correct in style needs only to see these suits to satisfy herself that none others are comparable.

Here you will find hundreds of the season's choicest styles and the most wanted colors and materials. Not one garment was purchased especially for the event. They are our own regular goods, bought in the regular way and reduced to the lowest price that has yet been named for like quality. In reality it is January prices offered in early NOVEMBER.

For your convenience, and ours, we have assembled the entire collection in three separate lots---three distinct prices---each representing the greatest value known in ready-to-wear circles this year.

$47.85

For Suits Worth up to $85.00

$74.85

For Suits Worth up to $110.00

$97.85

For Suits Worth up to

Doeskin Gauntlets

There's no gainsaying the popularity of the Gauntlet with its soft, wrinkling cuffs, and these are washable which makes them all the more desirable. Shown in white and chamois all sizes. An unusually good value for pair.

$4.95

9x12 Wilton Rugs $92.50
Reduced from $125.00 to . . . . .

These are our handsomest room size rugs, and in order to reduce our stock, which is larger than we care to own at this time, we offer our regular $125 grades at pre-war price.

Those who know value will appreciate this offer. They are the kind of rugs that every woman wants in her home, the kind that give distinction and refinement to a room. Shown in dull blues, soft rose and different tones of tan and brown in beautiful all-over and conventional patterns.

Another Sale of 27-Inch Axminsters Values up to $4.85
$8.00 . . . . .

We received another lot of these pretty little rugs, a fortunate purchase, which we have added to those we had left from previous sale. They are in Axminsters and Velvets in beautiful colors and patterns, and would retail regularly for $6.50 to $8.00.

A Pretty Bag Handle Is Half the Making
A new shipment brought us a host of new handles in all styles and colors: amber, ivory, shell, celluloid and metal. The metal ones are 50c up and the others range from $1.00 up.

These Lowered Prices for Fashionable Silks and Velvets

$3.25 for 36-Inch
Costume Velvet

Our Regular $5.00 Grade

A beautiful quality, fast pile and fast color, soft and supple enough for dress and yet with sufficient body for coats or suits. All the best shades—navy, brown, copen, black, burgundy and purple.

$1.69 for 36-Inch
Dress Satin

Our Regular $2.25 Grade

In black only—an exceptional value—a quality that cannot be duplicated anywhere at this price. We would suggest that you buy several yards, even if you don't need it now, for the uses of black satin are varied.

$3.95 for 40-Inch
Charmeuse

Our Regular $5.50 Grade

Beautifully lustrous with a firm finish that will stay smooth as long as there's a piece of it. Comes in navy, brown, taupe and black.

$2.50 for Crepe de Chine Shirting

Our Regular $3.50 Quality

A heavy quality in all the newest colors and stripes. Many a silk shirt is in the making for Christmas, and these silks are ideal for that purpose.

$4.50 for 40-Inch
Satin Crepe

Our Regular $5.00 Grade

Satin Crepe has been a favorite this season, and this one is supple with a wonderfully lovely sheen that makes it suitable for the most elaborate frocks. Black, brown, navy.

$1.25 for 12-Mome
Jap Pongee

Our Regular $2.50 Grade

This is a splendid quality, measuring 33 inches, and is suitable for men's and women's blouses and children's frocks.

Ziegler's Fine Shoes
$15.75 Models

$12.50

There is no need to comment on the quality of Ziegler Shoes—Ziegler wearers know they are smartly styled, beautifully shaped, and will give the utmost in wear.

In this sale we offer a smart walking boot of dark brown Russia, welt sole and Cuban heel, also the same style in black.

Also included is a dressy soft kid boot with plain toe, welt sole and cravatette top.

Other important shoe values are smart walking boots and dress boots at $7.50, $10.00 and $12.50.

Ribbons

Offer artistic possibilities for Christmas gift problems

Whether it be a mere "thing-a-ma-jig" of loops of satin ribbon or a gorgeous brocaded bag, the gift of ribbon certainly has a way of ingratiating itself into the heart of the recipient.

Beautiful Bag Ribbons in metallic, brocaded, embroidered and rich Oriental effects, . . . . . 92 up

Roman Stripe Ribbons, more particularly for sashes, also in plaid—lovely colors . . . . . $1.50 up

Pretty Dresden Ribbons, also ribbons in rich Persian and bright colored stripes and plaids, suitable for fancy work as well as hair bows and sashes. 6 to 9 inches wide. Unusual values at . . . . . $1.00 Yd.

Hair Bow Ribbons to fasten unruly curls or top knots, in ever so many pretty plaids, checks and stripes, also Dresdens. 75c Value; Special at . . . . . 49c

Coatings of Luxurious Warmth

The styles this season favor the "wrappy," graceful lines of the long coat, and here are fabrics soft and lissome, and withal, luxuriously warm, at prices that are in keeping with the present moderate level. For instance:

Polo Coatings are $4.95 to $7.50

Glengary Coatings are $4.50 to $6.50

Kersey Coatings are $4.95 to $6.95

Silverstone Coatings are $4.50 to $6.50

Goldtip Coatings are $4.50 to $6.50

Novelty Checks are $4.50 to $6.50

Novelty Plaids are $4.50 to $6.50

Velvety Coatings are $6.50 to $7.50

Velour Coatings are $4.95 to $6.50

Irish Frieze Coatings are $5.95

Bolivia Coatings are $9.50 to $12.50

These are in warm autumn colors—browns, shading from bisque to dark seal; Chinese blues, French blues, navy, reindeer, taupe burgundy, heather effects, also plaids and stripes. Widths 52 to 56 inches.

$4.50 For 54-Inch All-Wool Plaids

Our Regular $6.50 Grade

Some of the loveliest plaids we own are in this group, and people tell us ours are unusually attractive. Rich color combinations in handsome striking patterns as well as the more subdued effects.

$2.00 Bungalow Aprons for $1.49

A new shipment of these dainty, crisp little aprons, bought at lowered prices, enables us to sell them for a great deal less than you've been paying for the same grade. They are made of Scout percales in neat stripes, checks and plaids, finished with contrast binding, patch pockets and wide belt.

GET IT OUT OF THE WAY.

There is ample time in which the republicans may dispose of the peace treaty and the league of nations covenant before the democratic administration relinquishes control of the government.

Congress meets on the 6th of December.

Nobody knows what policy the president has in mind to follow with reference to the Versailles treaty.

It was rejected by the present senate as a result of the attitude assumed by the president in opposing reservations.

The president can either resubmit the treaty when congress reconvenes for the short term next December, or he can treat the matter as a closed chapter pending the inauguration of his successor and the assembling of the new congress, which unquestionably will immediately be called by President Harding in extraordinary session.

The present senate is republican. Among its members are many of the republican leaders who were most conspicuous in the recent campaign, the president-elect himself being one of them.

Why not, then, resubmit the question to this senate and let it be disposed of without the unnecessary delay that would be entailed by waiting for the new congress to act?

The verdict of the people has been rendered; and it was undeniably against the attitude assumed by President Wilson to the effect that the treaty should be ratified without material reservations.

But the president-elect and many of his strongest republican supporters took a position favoring an "association of nations" founded upon the theory that all nations of the world should co-operate and work together toward an international basis of "peace and justice."

Since the president-elect has asserted that position since his election, and since it seems to be generally assumed that even the republicans most violently opposed to the league covenant as it was submitted by the president are in favor of something along this line, the matter might now be resubmitted to the senate, that the job may be completed as soon as possible.

If the president should take this position in resubmitting the document there probably would be no objection on the part of the democratic in the senate to the ratification of any reasonable measure that might be agreed upon by the republicans.

Certainly, there should not be!

Governor Cox, the democratic candidate for president, was right when in his after-election statement, he said:

"For the first time in ten years the republican party is in complete control of the legislative and executive branches of the national government. Therefore, policy as to statute and administration is with it. Its task is no longer that of the critic, but the constructor. It is my hope and firm belief that the democracy of the nation will not attempt political sabotage. The country has seen quite enough of that."

The league issue, having been fought out before the people and the verdict rendered at the polls, the democrats should not make the mistake of quibbling now over matters that are bigger and broader than the bounds of partisan debate."

It was all right to debate such matters in a political campaign, but now that the republicans have had the whole responsibility put upon their shoulders by the people, they should be given free rein so that they will be in no position to say that they were embarrassed by the opposition.

In this way the question can be disposed of by the present republican senate, of which the president-elect is a member, and in which his voice would largely control in the settlement of this question.

Indeed, Senator Harding could write with his own hands precisely what he wants in the way of treaty amendments or reservations, and both sides would, no doubt, accept it.

He is in position practically to dictate the decision.

Undoubtedly the "bitter-enders" like Lodge, Johnson, Borah, Poincier and La Follette, and the "treaty-with-reservation" leaders, such as Cummins, and others, would defer to his wishes. He could call in Root, Taft, Hoover, Butler, and the others of that element who supported him, and after conference with both elements of his own party he could draft such a document as he would be willing to sponsor, and put it before the senate as a member of that body.

And it would go through, practically without debate, so that when the new administration takes hold of the government the decks would be clean, that issue settled and out of the way, leaving the new regime free to devote its time to such other measures as will demand its attention.

It would help business. It would stabilize commerce the world over.

And, best of all, it would pave the way for better prices for our agricultural products before the next harvest season.

THE WAR ON DOPESTERS.

Southeastern federal authorities headed by D. J. Gant, supervising prohibition enforcement officer, deserve praise for their activities against what is alleged to be an organized gang of smugglers and purveyors of inhibited narcotic drugs.

The officers profess to have unearthed a so-called "dope ring" in the southeast, several members of which already have been put under arrest, and they are "hot on the trail" of others.

It was to be hoped there will be a recession from this worthy campaign so long as one belonging to the dispicable type of criminal remains at large.

There is no more inhumane, more contemptible, more vile, human being than a man or a woman who will engage in the despicable business of supplying narcotic drugs to others for a price!

The whisky boot-legger is mean and low enough; but compared with a "dope peddler," the miserable outlaw who pollutes society and degrades his fellow man by blind dithering whisky is a paragon of the worst.

Thus the great political change, which many of the anti-suffragists predicted would bring chaos and confusion and the lower of the standard of American womanhood, came about and nothing happened. The earth still pursues its orbit; the stars did not fall; none of our cherished institutions was disturbed; the home is still the home, and the fireside still the most hallowed spot on the face of God's earthly creation.

Everywhere, too, the influence of the "woman vote" seems to have been good, and in the direction of purer, cleaner local politics.

For example, The Kansas City Star remarked editorially the day after election that "the wholesomeness of their influence was shown in Kansas City yesterday when their votes, based on a devotion to the welfare of the home, swamped the controlled vote and the ghost vote of the river wards."

"Their franchise," continues The Star, "is a privilege and a responsibility, and in a spirit of recognition of this two-fold fact it has been accepted by them."

The women of America have, it seems, abundantly vindicated their right to vote; and the only thing we Georgians have to regret in this connection is that legal circumstances unfortunately were such that our own 1920 elections could not have the benefit of our women's participation.

NATIONAL PARKS.

The National Parks Association, whose membership roster includes the names of many of the nation's leading scientists and educators, recently issued a report in the nature of a vigorous protest against efforts that have been made by private interests to invade certain national parks in the west for purposes of exploitation of their hydro-electric, timber, mineral and other natural resources.

The substance of their protest is not only a plea for inviolate preservation of the existing national parks, but for the creation of new parks while territory that is adaptable and appropriate for such purposes is still available.

Expressing vigorous editorial support of the position taken by the national parks organization, The Spokane (Wash.) Spokesman-Review advances this telling and indisputable argument in behalf of the parks that already have been created:

"These parks have a historic and a scenic value that is of at least swept him into defeat, and his political passing is a partial compensation to the country for some of the disappointments otherwise suffered.

Another election blessing to the nation was the defeat of the non-partisan league in its heretofore strongholds in the northwest. And with the non-partisan league should be linked the so-called farmer-labor party, both organizations being practically one and the same, and both feeding on ignorance, prejudice, passion and radicalism.

The non-partisan league represents the demagoguery of three men of socialistic tendencies, and in reality an organization of neither farmers nor laborers, but a socialist party adjunct, masquerading as a friend of the toilers in the fields and shops.

It is controlled by A. C. Townley, William Lemke and F. B. Wood, who by the by-laws perpetuate themselves in office. Townley and Wood are both old North Dakota socialist agitators, and have run for office in that state on the ticket of that party. One of the first editors of their newspaper "Organ" was D. C. Coates, who helped Bill Haywood organize the I. W. W.

It had become a "balance of power" in some of the northwestern states, and as cannibal followings are thus often "honored," suddenly found itself in covetous favor with both the old party machines.

It would help business. It would stabilize commerce the world over.

And, best of all, it would pave the way for better prices for our agricultural products before the next harvest season.

AN OUTGROWN PRACTICE.

In an elaborate editorial review of the life of the late Zebulon R. Brockway, a penologist of international fame, and of whom it has been said "he might be called the founder of prison science," The Springfield (Mass.) Republican recently observed—

"Quite in accord with the present accepted view of progressive penologists was Mr. Brockway's opinion, strengthened by his experience, that the great bulk of the prison population consists of individuals who can be developed providing they are in the proper environment and the right incentive is introduced in their lives."

This was in support of Mr. Brockway's life-long contention that in too many of our penal institutions the "proper environment and the right incentive" are withheld from, rather than extended, to those who transgress the law.

Mr. Brockway, who died at his home in Elmira, N. Y., the other day, "at the patriarchal age of 88," began his first-hand acquaintance with prisons and criminals as a clerk in the Connecticut state penitentiary, in 1848; and from that time until the day of his death, prison reform, and the remaking of errant men and women was his life work.

He had served in official capacities as clerk, guard or warden in numerous penitentiaries in various parts of the country.

He introduced the "Elmira system" of prison management while he was superintendent of the Elmira state reformatory, which institution, under his management, became widely known as a "model prison," and the pattern for prisons in several other states.

His inclusion of corporal punishment in his disciplinary system, to which many of the anti-suffragists predicted would bring chaos and confusion and the lower of the standard of American womanhood, came about and nothing happened. The earth still pursues its orbit; the stars did not fall; none of our cherished institutions was disturbed; the home is still the home, and the fireside still the most hallowed spot on the face of God's earthly creation.

Everywhere, too, the influence of the "woman vote" seems to have been good, and in the direction of purer, cleaner local politics.

For example, The Kansas City Star remarked editorially the day after election that "the wholesomeness of their influence was shown in Kansas City yesterday when their votes, based on a devotion to the welfare of the home, swamped the controlled vote and the ghost vote of the river wards."

"Their franchise," continues The Star, "is a privilege and a responsibility, and in a spirit of recognition of this two-fold fact it has been accepted by them."

The substance of their protest is not only a plea for inviolate preservation of the existing national parks, but for the creation of new parks while territory that is adaptable and appropriate for such purposes is still available.

Expressing vigorous editorial support of the position taken by the national parks organization, The Spokane (Wash.) Spokesman-Review advances this telling and indisputable argument in behalf of the parks that already have been created:

"These parks have a historic and a scenic value that is of at least equal importance with their economic and industrial value. They represent the primeval wilderness which our pioneer fathers subjected and which we ourselves are taming to the uses of civilization. Twenty-five years hence the parks will be all that will then show what it was that was reclaimed. They will be the only natural wilds inside of civilization that are accessible."

The south is one section of the country in which federal activities in the way of creation of national parks has too long been neglected.

In our mountainous regions and in our vast expanses of swamp and the south has natural characteristics that are peculiarly adaptable for national park purposes, presenting, as they do, scenic grandeur and primitive conditions of life—faunal and floral—that are excelled nowhere.

Once changed—once our forests are gone, our waterfalls disfigured, our swamp lands converted into fields of cultivated crops—those natural characteristics that make them now alluring to the tourist and the scientist can never be restored.

It is timely now, before it is too late, for steps to be taken, looking to the safeguarding of the most typical and most adaptable of our southern beauty-spots and wonderlands against further defacement and destruction by the encroachment of industry.

And the Dreams come home.

And the Dreams come home from their wanderings far, With Love's first morning and Love's first star;

With the red o' the rose and the breath o' the May And the tears o' the years are kissed away.

The fire is singing of those lost years— Of Love, the rewarder for all Life's tears;

The ship to Love's haven from over the foam.

And the Dreams come home.

And the Dreams wreath light 'round a starless night And the old, sweet heaven of youth's in sight;

And arms around, and a face to rest'

In peace, after tempest, on Love's dear breast.

Sing winter fire, of visions past,

And the sweeter of Love that's home at last:

Nevermore in the dark to roam.

BUILDING BUSINESS IN LATIN AMERICA

A Series of Practical Instructive Articles on How to Export

By HARRY O. MITCHELL.

Formerly Special Trade Investigator, Latin-American Markets, on Staff of "La Hacienda" and Managing Editor of "Ferreteria"

Copyrighted, 1920, by The Atlanta Constitution.

IT HAS been truly said that "to learn to classify is in itself a liberal education." This injunction applies with specific force to the manufacturer desirous of entering foreign markets, and he will find nothing more helpful, both from the standpoint of getting organized and for successfully carrying on an active export business, than to have a man of his acquaintance, where he may obtain reliable and pertinent information on all the various factors which enter into the conduct of business with other countries.

There are available numerous sources of information on trading with Latin-America, that for the sake of convenience, may be broadly and somewhat freely classified as follows:

Government bureaus and agencies; commercial organizations and trade associations; railroads and other transportation companies.

Publishers of export journals. Magazines, metropolitan newspapers, trade journals and house organs.

Year books, encyclopedias, guides, directories, commercial atlases, etc.

Textbooks on foreign trade.

Under the first head are included the United States Bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, with headquarters at Washington, D. C., and offices of its various bureaus located in the principal cities throughout the country; the department of state and our consular and trade representatives abroad; the Pan-American union, and for consuls and other trade emissaries located at Washington, New York and other points in the United States.

The government bureau of foreign and domestic commerce is perhaps the most valuable agency that has been provided to help our manufacturers build business abroad, although the Pan-American union runs a close second, especially in regard to trade with the Latin-American countries.

A daily "bulletin" is issued by the bureau, known as "commerce reports." This is something that every exporter should have and the information it contains is available to every one. "Commerce reports" contain daily listings of the wants of foreign manufacturers, and on current developments abroad as reported by our consuls and other agencies, tariff, marine and other information, reviews of conditions in other countries, statistical reports, valuable lists of merchants and a variety of other data. Application for subscription should be made to the government printing office, Washington, D. C.

The bureau also publishes a great variety of reports and valuable trade suggestions. These are too numerous to list.

REDUCED PRICES ON AUTOMOBILE BODIES

The Martin-Perry corporation, manufacturers of commercial automobile bodies, yesterday announced, through R. G. Seibert, manager of its local branch, substantial reductions on the complete line of bodies and equipment, effective November 1.

"In taking this action the Martin-Perry corporation is prompted by a desire to co-operate fully in the nation-wide movement now under way to the lower level of prices which the buying public is demanding," said Mr. Seibert.

Export clubs in some of our large commercial centers, such as the Boston Export Round Table, New York Export Managers' club, and the recently organized Atlanta Export club.

Railroads, steamship companies, express companies, ocean freight forwarders and other transportation agencies are sources of much information and practical assistance.

Many of the railroads now maintain, in the interest of increasing traffic, development departments and from these may be obtained much useful guidance.

The Southern railroad has an active interest in the promotion of foreign trade among our manufacturers, and their Chattanooga office has a full and useful information service for the commercial planning an overseas business.

The writer has been advised that the Line railroad, Georgia railroad, Atlantic and Western, and affiliated lines, and the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic railroad are all interested in the development of southern trade with Latin America, and are ready to aid manufacturers in many ways.

The latter road has just recently opened foreign trade offices in New York, Boston, and Montgomery, and is in the process of establishing similar offices in other southern cities.

The steamship companies operating lines between southern ports and Latin America are of great help to the exporter. There are many American and foreign shipping lines moving out of southern ports: the Lloyd Brasiliense, Munzen, United Fruit, Pacific Mail, Jacksonville line, etc.

These lines have a full and useful information service for the commercial planning an overseas business.

WHY THE 'FIVE-AND-TENS' WILL THRIVE

They Are Always Attractive in Appearance as Well as Appealing in Price.

BY CAROLINE E. THOMAS.
Advertising Manager McClure Ten-Cent Company.

The 5 and 10-cent, or popular limit-price stores, are the servants of the people. They get you the little merchandise necessities quickly, and at a price you can afford. They are the "movies" of the mercantile world, merchandise coming and going all the time. The 5 and 10-cent stores operate on a smaller capital than most mercantile establishments and quick turnovers.

Some think that the average customer going into one of these stores only spends a dime, but it has been estimated that the average amount spent by the average 5-cent store is at least 25 per cent more people who enter a store of this kind than any other. Thus you will find that there are many small sales that make the volume.

Why do so many people frequent the 10-cent stores?

Because they are places and have a certain little display arranged to attract. It has been estimated that selling is 85 per cent sight. The 5 and 10-cent merchant has a side table, a basket, a bushel; it is displayed to attract attention. "Well displayed merchandise is half sold."

Have you ever entered a 10-cent store to get some specific article and were in a hurry, but had your attention attracted by a display of some other household article or small, useful article? You have needed for some time, but considered it too trivial to burden your memory with? Well, the 5 and 10-cent stores are a reminder of just these annoying little details that are always forgetting when shopping.

The Limit Idea.

Many of the so-called 5 and 10-cent stores have 25-cent and $1 items, while the McClure Ten-Cent Company, of which we are operators in this section of the country, bases on the principle of 5 and 10-cent merchandising, has combined the 5 and 10-cent idea with the department store plan and operates under a $5 limit.

The limit idea is good for both merchant and customer. If a merchant operates a 5 and 10-cent store, or a chain of stores, his quantity capacity for buying and limit of prices will enable him to buy at a closer margin than is usually ready and willing; in fact, anxious to buy goods.

We will take, for granted, that the stores are all set up and ready for business. They issue invitations for the people of Georgia to come to Atlanta to trade. Then they go to the railroad stations "set" and get the railroad stations "set" along the service line; the railroads are the first place you see when coming to a city and the impression gained there are favorable.

From the station you go to the hotel. These should also be "set," or at least quite understand what a hotel clerk means when he says, "We have no bank account." However, the clerk gave him a room and commented on the time he ever came to Atlanta to stay over night. When he went down to dinner all dressed in his (and you know, Englishman will use up) he was ordered what he considered a good dinner. When the coup came, the waiter, a colored man, had his thumb in it. The Englishman called him out.

Patrons Are Thrifty.

When times are good the 5 and 10-cent business prospers; when times are bad, it still prospers, but not as much. Because it can hold its own regular trade (which may be curtailed in amount of purchase) and get additional sales from people who have been buying from the 5 and 10-cent stores.

Very few failures occur among the ranks in this line of business, because the buying and selling plan is active--no heavy stocking up.

As long as folks are just people and are just people, the 5 and 10-cent stores will continue on their present and popular path to success. This is inevitable, for they are close to the hearts of the great mass of our citizens.

times of depression, for the words "5 and 10 cents" act as a magnet to draw the public when the purse is empty.

How to Bring Trade to Atlanta

By Cator Woolford, President Retail Credit Company

The people of this section are prosperous and have money to spend and it is up to the merchants of Atlanta to have them trade here.

In order to bring business here and hold it, the merchants will have to "get set" for the business. Better still, their rates to meet the present cost and situation and provide courteous service to shoppers coming to Atlanta.

Prepare for the customer who comes by automobile. Have the cars loaded and assist them. Make it as easy as possible for them to get around the city, and do not hold them too tightly on traffic regulations.

Other little things will be necessary, such as giving you a friendly greeting, "Hello, Georgia." Customer treatment to automobile customers must be made and add to the general business.

A central checking stand would prove an attractive feature for out-of-towners. Shoppers in the shopping district, put a competent man in charge. When a purchase is made give the customer check and attach a duplicate check to the package. Send the package to the checking stand. When the shopper is ready to leave, she can then call and get all of her purchases for the day.

I am pleased to note by the papers that we are having some good sales in Atlanta, which is a good sign. This will greatly help in bringing shoppers here, as people like to be entertained in the evening after the day's shopping.

Many people go to New York to shop, not because of the quality of goods, but because of the price reduction of the mills has been met by local people.

Announcing our present prices to the buying public has stated the week, "We are not ready to meet the market conditions than has Atlanta."

Walter C. Barnwell of the Rainier Club, Atlanta, has said, "We are not the best advertising practice to jump into print with a large advertisement to run only once or twice, but that the constant every day advertising talk would bring home the bacon."

Taking up one thing at a time in each advertisement is most effective, according to Mr. Harmon, with possibly a phrase as an afterthought about some related line of insurance.

Mr. Harmon believes in quoting prices when possible, but he says he has found that price is not the principal thing. He believes in stressing service above everything else.

There has not been an issue of my local paper for practically two years that has not contained a few words calling attention to some department of my insurance agency.

Many of these advertisements have apparently gone off into space without return results, but I am willing to say that every advertisement that has appeared has borne fruit at some time.

More seasonable weather, the holiday season and the passing of the politically supercharged atmosphere of the Rainier Club will have a healthier effect on trade conditions than any influences to the contrary--and that means an early resumption of steady buying.

Proposal to Hold Great World's Fair Here in 1925 Enthusiastically Indorsed by Many Leading Citizens

Time Now Ripe to Plan For Big Exposition, Declares H. G. Hastings

A World's Exposition in Atlanta in 1925—this is not the idle dream of an idealist, but the sober thought of many of Atlanta's leading citizens, whose acquaintance with things of that nature, and whose better acquaintance, still, with the possibilities for such an event in Atlanta, the natural center of the southeastern section of the United States, is unquestioned.

On this page today is proof of the fact that the vision is one with reason and a foundation, found in an article of explanation and demonstration of possibility by H. G. Hastings, president of the Southeastern Fair association, whose authority to judge the opportunity for a world's fair isundened, since all the southeast knows his successful activities in interest of the annual event which brings thousands of visitors to Atlanta.

It, also, is the thought which was expressed some time ago by Ivan E. Allen, a prominent business man, who has served the county in the state senate, and one of the pioneers in the movement which finally gave Atlanta her excellent fair ground at Lakewood park—the proposed nucleus for a world-wide exposition.

The matter, within recent days, has received the closer attention of the city through the passage of a resolution indorsing the idea by city council. The resolution was introduced by Councilman R. A. Gordon, and upon the action of council, a committee was appointed by Mayor Key to investigate the proposition thoroughly and to see what action should be taken to exhaust every source of information on preparation for such an event.

Scores of other Atlantans, hundreds of men throughout the south, whose business acumen and sound judgment make their opinion worthy, have given the idea their unstinted approval.

Walter G. Cooper, well-known Atlantan, who served as chief of publicity and promotion for the Cotton States and International exposition here in 1895, has expressed his enthusiasm over the idea, because of his first-hand knowledge of the great value which accrued to Atlanta from the exposition with which he was officially connected.

The article of Mr. Hastings sets forth the idea in reasonable and concrete fashion, showing the opportunities which abound.

Time Ripe to Plan World's Fair To Be Held in Atlanta in 1925

BY H. G. HASTINGS
President Southeastern Fair Association.

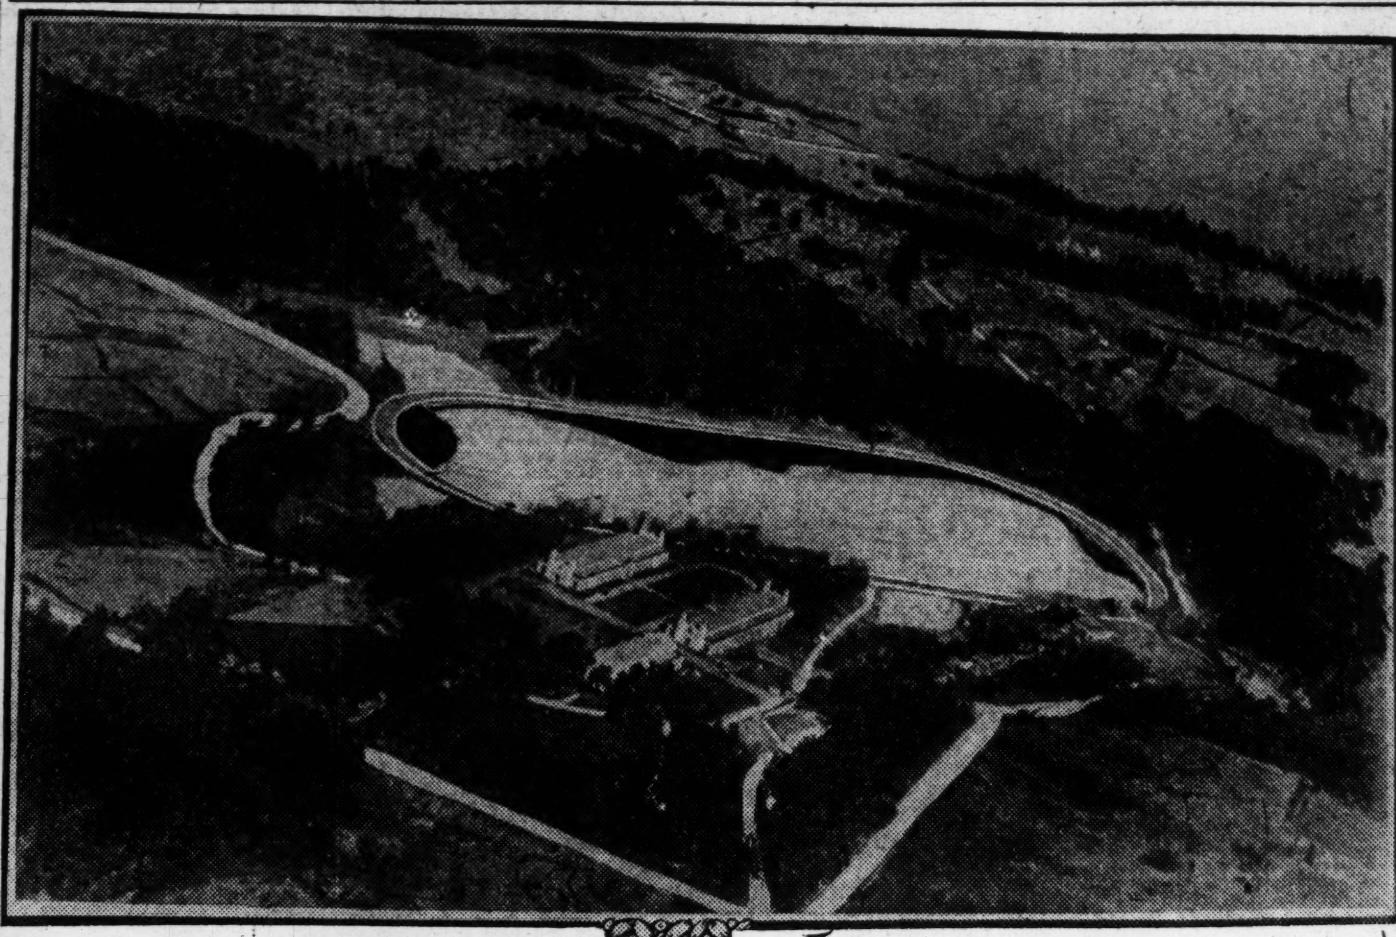

Some two years or more ago Mr. Ivan E. Allen suggested the desirability of a world's fair for Atlanta. By 1925 thirty years will have elapsed since the Piedmont exposition of 1895; ten years will have elapsed since the last major exposition (San Francisco) has been held anywhere in the United States, and by that time the people will have recovered from the war and readjustment period that we are now passing through.

OF GREAT BENEFIT TO ATLANTA.

In discussing this subject from the purely Atlanta point of view it is evident that Atlanta would be vastly benefited by an infusion of new business and industrial blood that would undoubtedly result from a world's fair held here. Such a result followed the Piedmont exposition in marked degree.

Few realize that a very large part of the present business personnel of Atlanta, the leaders, moved to Atlanta between 1895 and 1900 influenced directly or indirectly to

Bird's-Eye Aeroplane View of Southeastern Fair Grounds Proposed as Site for Atlanta's World Exposition

This is the best bird's-eye view yet obtained of the grounds of the Southeastern fair. The cut is made from an aeroplane photograph taken by The Constitution's photographer, Francis E. Price, shortly before the recent fair.

The illustration shows the great scope of the fair grounds, consisting of nearly 400 acres, more than 50 of which is covered by the lake, which appears in the center of the mile race track, as shown in the cut.

A large part of the wooded part of the landscape, as shown above and on both sides of the race track, belongs to the grounds of the Southeastern Fair association, the building development of which has been confined up to this time only to that part of the grounds as shown on the lower side of the lake.

In the upper center of the cut, near the top, is shown the United States prison, surrounded by its mammoth wall, and covering an area, including the grounds owned by the federal prison outside of the wall, nearly a mile square.

Between the federal prison and on the straight line to the left of the cut above the woodland is shown the outskirts of the city of Atlanta, Lakewood avenue passing between the city outskirts, as shown, and the federal prison, and approaching the fair grounds to the right of the lake and the race track as shown.

The other roads as seen in the cut are the main approaches to the city.

Some two years or more ago Mr. Ivan E. Allen suggested the desirability of a world's fair for Atlanta. By 1925 thirty years will have elapsed since the Piedmont exposition. Scores of our business and professional leaders could be named that were influential to come here by that really wonderful (for its time) exposition.

Atlanta needs, as it never needed before, some great project like this, something that our people could concentrate on as something worth while and submerge our minor and largely exaggerated differences that to say the least do not work for the advantage of Atlanta.

Georgia needs a great exposition of this character to give an opportunity to display in concrete form our country's agricultural, cultural, mineral and industrial resources and activities, a standing invitation to the world to come and view the progress of our largely undeveloped resources and potential wealth.

Our sister states of the south all have an opportunity to similarly display their wonderful products and resources and potentialities. They, like Georgia, have undeveloped resources and opportunities suited to all phases of human endeavor and the people of the United States know little or nothing of them.

WOULD DEVELOP FOREIGN TRADE.

The development of foreign trade with Cuba, Central and South America by the south through both rail and gulf ports is already a fact. The question of a world's fair in Atlanta would give a great stimulus to the building of permanent development force in the southeast, or as a draw of people and business to the city. The larger and better business would be developed, making the greater its usefulness to Atlanta and the south east.

SPLENDID START IN PRESENT BUILDINGS.

When the Southeastern fair was planned it was to be largely on a permanent construction basis. The three large exhibition buildings now have an example. We have built slowly but permanently. The original fair plan, so far as buildings are concerned are less than half completed, yet every one of our present permanent buildings and the ones planned lend themselves admirably to exposition purposes.

With a proper exhibition of the south's and Latin America's resources and products a vigorous effort could be made to bring the exposition to the people, prospective settlers and investors from states further north. It would be a proper opportunity for the south to present under favorable conditions a wealth of opportunity to the public generally and especially further north, does not dream of.

Now is the time. An exposition of this character could be staged by Atlanta to better advantage than any other city in this country. The foundation is already laid for the present development of the Southeastern fair and Lakewood park, admirably adapted for large exposition purposes.

Some of us most closely connected with the exposition have kept this project in mind ever since the subject was first broached and from time to time have looked the situation over and I can press it, visualized a world's fair on the Lakewood tract.

Few realize the value of the Lakewood park property. There is a splendid body of wooded land extending from the lake back to the Clark university grounds, which with the present developed fair grounds would give ample space for any exposition that Atlanta would stage. This would be more than double the size of Picadilly, where the 1895 exposition was held. Our idea as to construction grading and landscaping is somewhat different than the plan usually followed in building expositions. Other expositions have been constructed on a hurry-up plan, crowding the buildings in as quickly as possible, or at best eighteen months and the character of the buildings and work of a most temporary character, all of which are easily torn down after the exposition with comparatively little salvage value.

PERMANENT PLANT AT LAKWOOD.

Under the most moderate annual building program, the Southeastern fair would have increased facilities and larger and better fairs up to 1925. The original fair plan, so far as buildings are concerned are less than half completed, yet every one of our present permanent buildings and the ones planned lend themselves admirably to exposition purposes.

Briefly our idea is a moderate annual building program, carried through the four intervening years.

This coming year build the two permanent buildings needed to accommodate the thousands around the plaza. These could immediately be used for an enlarged Southeastern fair just as buildings erected for the 1895 fair could be used for permanent purposes until exposition time.

A moderate building program carried on in this general manner will do much to develop a market for material or bringing in unwieldy bodies of floating labor attracted by work that has to be done on a rush basis. It would stabilize the general situation and insure steady employment for labor that already resides here.

Very naturally a world's fair would stimulate through the intervening years building and business to a very large extent the present fair grounds would give ample space for any exposition that Atlanta would stage. This would be more than double the size of Picadilly, where the 1895 exposition was held.

Rebuilding the Ideal Man

He Need Not Be Affectionate According to the New Standard of Requirements Modern Woman Is Establishing for Husbands, but He Must Be Dominating, a Week-End Institution and a Good Provider.

The Lion
Lord
King
of
the
Men

YOU will understand that he was built long ago, and from time to time has been rebuilt to suit changing tastes and conditions. When he is built to suit he is at first called a hero. Thereafter he is called a husband. Just now he is being rebuilt again.

Just now he is being rebuilt again. If men are what women make them, it is inevitable that a changed theory on the part of women should be represented in the changed man. Since the war women have formed new notions about men. They admit it themselves. And men admit it. Men, naturally, were quick to hear of the changed notions. They were a bit startled by them. The old hero stuff has gone out. The cave man idea was sized up and may be said to have had a look-in. Then the cave man was discarded. The rebuilt ideal man, when he is quite finished, will be far less simple than that. A real cave man would have as hard a time today as one of the old-fashioned fluffy heroes.

You might as well know that the new ideal is not simple at all. The women who are rebuilding him are not simple. Oh, no! Very complicated—that's what you would say of the modern woman. The modern woman is free. She wants her independence. And she doesn't want too much of any man. She refuses to be owned. Sometimes she seems to want a chum for a husband. Not a servant, or a mere "provider," or a boss, or a picture man. None of these things—alone. Maybe she's building a sort of composite. They liked the qualities of Lord Kitchener, for example, Kitchener of Khartoum, who obstinately refused to marry. Obviously he was right from many abstract points of view. Suppose he had been a good lover in the bargain? Suppose he had looked like Paul Swan? Now you're on the track of the great combination—maybe.

When we come down to a guess as to what the new ideal is to include, we are dependent on confessions women themselves have made. Naturally, writing women are spokeswomen for all the others. Writing women have been making it plain—sometimes shockingly plain—that they find many faults in men as they are; and we get glimpses of men as they want them to be.

"Ideal qualities. They run like this:
"Absolutely essential—forcefulness, honesty.
"Highly valued—capability, sense of humor.
"Moderately valued—comradeship, affection.
"Indifferently valued—religion, amiability.
"Forcefulness is what every woman wants in a man. A vigorous, forceful man who thinks 'largely' and is absolutely 'square.' A woman wants to be dominated. I fail to understand how any woman can love a man who is not strong enough to dominate her. He must be her superior, mentally as well as physically."

Even the Paul Swan Type of Manly Beauty Does Not Seem to Conform to the Newly Standardized Requirements of the Ideal

short week-end." Surely, this is a crusher for the sentimental. Does "Jane Burr" imply that the woman writer who "breakfasts" with her musician husband was the avatar of the new ideal? Is it possible that the modern woman wants her husband to room in a nearby boarding house or hotel? Surely, it would be handy to step to the telephone, lift up the receiver and say:

"Hello! Rest Easy Apartments? Please send my husband over to see me." Or, "Hello, Swell-Exclusive Boarding House? Well, page my husband, please, and tell him his wife wants him. It seems he must be forgetting that this is visiting day."

In short, it seems that the woman of today wants the cream and nothing else. What is the cream? Romance. Going back to "Jane Burr," listen to what she has to say further on the subject:

romance out of love. I like men, but I can't bear to have them about the house."

Sort of no cooking, no sock darning, no nursing, no humoring marriage. Mostly joy.

But the age of the ideal man, too, has come in for a radical change. Grandma will tell you how proud she was that she got a young husband. Twenty-one was the age limit then. Older than that, the bridegroom was "getting along in years" and was "doomed to be a failure." Maybe

T. P. O'Connor, M. P., was reminiscent when he recently said: "If I were dictator, one of my laws would compel every boy to marry at twenty-one and every girl at eighteen." But the habits of the older generation are not approved by milady of today. Thirty for men and twenty-eight for women is the rule. Sociologists say they have determined that a man, under thirty, has not yet reached even an indicative salary figure, that he then knows as little about his actual capacity for providing as did his twenty-one-year-little about his actual capacity for providing as did his twenty-one-year-old benedict predecessor. Which, perhaps, has much to do with the great frequency of marriage of eighteen and forty. At forty a man, as a rule, has "arrived," if he ever is going to get there.

But what about that earning capacity? Does that figure greatly in the make-up of the new ideal? Grandma never bothered much about it. Love in a cottage was the goal of her young ambition. So prepare yourself for a shock. Dr. Edwin L. Clark of Ohio State University recently asked young women members of that institution to grade the characteristics essential in the ideal husband. Of course, Dr. Clark was counting on many things, appearance, physical qualifications, birth, profession, age and income. But his breath must have been taken away life will be happy, undisturbed by domestic spats, with occasional opportunities of calling on his wife.

After all, the traits demanded of the new ideal husband are but reflexes of the woman of the past generation. Then it was the husband who gave his company to his wife on week-ends. He used to remain out every other night at the club. Sunday he had to stay home, fatigued. Monday evening, he found himself conscience-smitten. Tuesday he was back with the boys again and his wife was amusing herself with the children, magazines, and a limited circle of sympathetic friends. So, is it any wonder that the woman wants her day? Surely, she long has been enslaved. She says so. The average fair-minded domesticated married man says so. Perhaps it will produce a better race of men, stronger in every way. As it is, sociologists assert, postponement of marriage by a decade has resulted in healthier children, even though it has aimed at merely en though it has aimed at morals. And so, it looks as though man, to become reconciled to a new domestic state, must permit himself to be rebuidled along lines which womankind, in her determination to have her own way, has decided upon as befitting her ideal husband.

What Is Your Fortune, My Pretty Maid?

By MRS. HENRY SYMES

"What is your fortune, my pretty maid?"

"My face is my fortune, Sir," she said.

If THE above question were put to modern girls, very few of them would give the well-known answer.

This need not be taken as an indication that the girls of today are less beautiful than the maid in the legend. It means rather that they build their fortunes on more substantial things than mere prettiness. Marriage is not the only career open to women and fortunes do not depend upon faces. It is brains, and hands and feet and eyes and ears that earn our fortunes these days.

The story does not state that the "pretty maid" took great care of her fortune, but we will venture the opinion that she did take excellent care of it. If she had known anything about insurance companies, she probably would have insured herself against the loss of her beauty.

It is significant, isn't it, this growth of insurance companies which put people against the loss of the thing which gives them their livelihood or makes their fortune? Great singers insure their voices. Dancers insure their toes, and a famous actress has even insured her back.

What have you done to insure that which earns your fortune? We do not mean that you should take out a policy in some insurance company. Oh, no! But we do think that you should start a little insurance company of your own. Very few of us are versatile enough to be able to make a living at a number of different things, so it behooves us to take very good care of that particular part of our body which is necessary in the earning of our fortunes.

Perhaps it is your feet which make your fortune. If you are a dancer, a sales person, or a solicitor, then as suredly this is so. Are your feet comfortable and at ease while you work? Do you, while at work, punish them with ill-fitting shoes or French heels? Do you give them the proper rest and care?

Article one of your insurance policy for feet should specify that your shoes must be comfortable and sane. This means that the heels should be of medium height and the vamps broad enough to admit of free movement of the toes in walking.

Article two should provide for a bath for the feet at least once daily and a frequent change of both shoes and stockings.

Are you a musician, a minstrel, or a stenographer? Then you need insurance on your hands, so that they may always look their very best. People do notice one's hands, you know, and very often one is judged by her appearance.

An insurance policy for your hands would keep the nails trimmed, shining and pink (but not too pink) and the cuticle free from ragged edges. Of course, you know that a hand which is rough and red is not fit to hold your fortune in its grasp.

Insure your eyes by treating them sanely and sympathetically. Do not make them work overtime in a dull light. Give them a cold water bath when they burn and feel tired.

And do not neglect insuring your brain, if that's what earns your fortune. The best health insurance for brains that we know of consists in the proper amount of sleep, good food, fresh air, and a reasonable amount of exercise.

An important feature of all these schemes for health insurance is the fact that the premiums are small and the dividends large.

Insure today!

ANSWERS TO BEAUTY QUERIES

Beauty and health helps are free to every one. If you want a prompt reply, be sure to inclose a stamped, addressed envelope. Otherwise, your query will have to wait its turn to be answered thru the column. All letters are absolutely confidential.

Miscellaneous Queries

Q. I am 19 years old and am 5 feet 6 inches tall. How much should I weigh? Will you print a remedy for reducing the weight? Will you print a remedy other than the nose and feet treatment, for reducing the weight? How long will it take to reduce my legs and bust? Is fruit fattening?—Betty Jane.

A. You should weigh 125 pounds. I am printing below the green soap treatment for blackheads and the formula for a lotion for oily skin.

Green Soap Treatment for Blackheads

Tincture of green soap ..... 2 ounces
Vaseline ..... 1/2 ounce
Lanolin ..... 1/2 ounce
Tincture of benzoin ..... 1/2 ounce

Let the mixture stay on a few moments, then wash off with hot water. This treatment will be effective, as it sometimes will, use it every other day. Apply a cold cream.

Q. I am 19 years old and may be purchased at a drug store. It is not a regular soap, but is of about the consistency of soap. What should I do with it?—Lillian.

Open each soap with the point of a fine cambric needle. The hardened soap will be easily removed. The remainder of the gland should then be bathed with a little toilet vinegar and water, or with a solution of one part cambric acid and water. Sterilize the needle before using it by dipping it into boiling water. The use of soap will not cleanse the skin as well, as the needle is thoroughly cleaned, is always dangerous.

Lotion for Oily Skin

With a piece of old linen or a bit of absorbent cotton.

Turpentine ..... 20 grains
Glycerin ..... 1/2 ounce

Apply by means of a brush or a bit of cotton to the baggy skin night and morning.

To Reduce the Ankles

Q. I am 15 years old and have very stout ankles. Will you please tell me what to do to make them thinner?—Brunette.

A. There is nothing one can do to reduce large ankles, if they are large boned. If, however, they are large only because of fat, then you may use the pomade printed below.

Pomade to Reduce Fat

lodole of potassium ..... 10 grains
Vaseline ..... 1/2 ounce
Lanolin ..... 1/2 ounce
Tincture of benzoin ..... 30 drops

Make into a pomade and rub over the fatty parts twice a day. You should abstain from food that is especially fattening—cereals, potatoes, corn, beans, etc. You should avoid sweets of all kinds.

To Reduce the Ankles

A. There is nothing one can do to reduce large ankles, if they are large boned. If, however, they are large only because of fat, then you may use the pomade printed below.

Pomade to Reduce Fat

lodole of potassium ..... 10 grains
Vaseline ..... 1/2 ounce
Lanolin ..... 1/2 ounce
Tincture of benzoin ..... 30 drops

Make into a pomade and rub over the fatty parts twice a day. You should abstain from food that is especially fattening—cereals, potatoes, corn, beans, etc. You should avoid sweets of all kinds.

Large Nose

Q. Will you please tell me how to get a small nose and long legs? My nose is very big and flat.—J. A.

A. There is nothing which will make a large nose smaller. I should not be too sensitive about it, however, for if you will keep it free from blackheads and large pores and use a bit of powder, so that its size will not be emphasized by the shade upon it, you can hardly be very objectionable. Nature takes care of your stature in her own way and you will have to be satisfied with the length of your legs.

To Reduce the Hips

Q. My hips are very large. In fact, they are entirely out of proportion with the rest of my body. Will you please give me an exercise to reduce them?—L. M.

A. I am printing below an exercise to reduce the hips. You must remember, however, that this will be valuable if the exercises are not performed regularly and conscientiously.

To Reduce the Hips

First—Bend the outstretched arms above the head, then bring them to the right position; then bend slowly forward from the waist; so that the fingers come as near touching the floor as possible without straining in any way. This is done without bending the knees. In recovering position, bring the arms back to the head—down—with the hands placed lightly on the hips. This is the first exercise. The body drops forward easily, so that it is bent at the waist. This must be done gently at first, then more easily, until the body turns to the right, counting four for each turn. Turn to the left, counting four for each turn; then to the back—being careful to do it very easily at first, till the body turns back to the right, then the same—again—till the movement can be done easily—the one to the left and back to the right.

Second—With the outstretched arms above the head, then bring them to the right position; then bend slowly forward from the waist; so that the fingers come as near touching the floor as possible without straining in any way. This is done without bending the knees. In recovering position, bring the arms back to the head—down—with the hands placed lightly on the hips. This is the first exercise. The body drops forward easily, so that it is bent at the waist. This must be done gently at first, then more easily, until the body turns to the right, counting four for each turn. Turn to the left, counting four for each turn; then to the back—being careful to do it very easily at first, till the body turns back to the right, then the same—again—till the movement can be done easily—the one to the left and back to the right.

Third—With the outstretched arms above the head, then bring them to the right position; then bend slowly forward from the waist; so that the fingers come as near touching the floor as possible without straining in any way. This is done without bending the knees. In recovering position, bring the arms back to the head—down—with the hands placed lightly on the hips. This is the first exercise. The body drops forward easily, so that it is bent at the waist. This must be done gently at first, then more easily, until the body turns to the right, counting four for each turn. Turn to the left, counting four for each turn; then to the back—being careful to do it very easily at first, till the body turns back to the right, then the same—again—till the movement can be done easily—the one to the left and back to the right.

"My Husband Must Be My Slave"

This Is the Assertion of the Beautiful, Mysterious Ganna Walska, Polish Singer, Whose Capture of Alexander Smith Cochran Has Shocked Society—Will America's Richest Bachelor Assume the Role His Bride Has Announced

for

AMERICA'S wealthiest and most hardened bachelor is a bachelor no more. Alexander Smith Cochran, owner of a fortune estimated at between $75,000,000 and $100,000,000, an obstinate practitioner of single blessedness through many years, a stern enemy of the most popular of the seven sacraments, who perennially preached his hatred for marriage and blew up with wrath when even an engagement was rumored for him, has marched to the altar and bowed his head to the yoke.

It is an extraordinary thing that such a proud, free spirit has succumbed to connubiality, which in every case is a yoke so heavy that it breaks the scales. But it is a surprise past words when one is told of the manner of matrimonial yoke that this champion of bachelorhood has taken it on himself to bear. Alexander Smith Cochran has married a lady whose expressed maxim is:

"MY HUSBAND MUST BE MY SLAVE."

Alex Cochran is past forty now. His fortune lies in the carpet manufacturing industry. He is well known in sport and philanthropy. He built the yacht Vanitie, which almost won the trials for the right to defend America's cup in the recent yacht races with Sir Thomas Lipton's craft. He built a three-masted auxiliary steel schooner, the Sea Call, for a trip to the tropics, but suddenly called the trip off and scrapped the ship. He has given away over $1,000,000 in private and public charities. When the war broke out he went to Belgium to aid the war victims. He donated several vessels to the British government and later made a gift of his great steam yacht Warrior to King George for war purposes. When America entered the war King George made Cochran commander of the Warrior and thereby an officer in the British navy. Thus, then, we find an important citizen, as well as a long-time marriage-hating bachelor in the man who has married the woman who is noted for her maxim:

"MY HUSBAND MUST BE MY SLAVE."

Who, then, is the woman whose intention to make her spouse a slave was so strong that she could not keep it to herself, but shouted it from the public forum, and who now has picked the prince of misogynistic bachelors, Alexander Smith Cochran, to be the slave? She is the noted Mme. Walska, the singer.

Six years ago a great French playlet entitled "Mme. Nitouche" was played at New York's Century Theater. The play did not set people afire, but one of the players did. This was a singer who presented several Slavic songs in a winning soprano voice, and who was of such a dark, fiery and yet imperious beauty that one who had seen her had difficulty in forgetting her. She was exquisitely formed and stately. Her eyes were of melting black, her expression one of mingled tenderness and pride.

People noticed that there was a cast of sorrow about the beauty, and to explain this a romantic story was told.

On the stage she was known as Ganna Walska, but in her true right she was a baroness, the wife of Baron Arcadi d'Eingorne, of the Russian army. It

Alexander Cochran doesn't seem to appear as sprightly and self-assured as in the days when he was America's foremost bachelor was said that she had created "The Merry Widow" in Russia and had had considerable stage experience abroad. She had been engaged to make her American début some time before at Hammerstein's old Victoria Music Hall, but while rehearsing she had received word that her husband had been killed in a battle in East Prussia. She had been prostrated by grief and her début had to be postponed until the advent of "Mme. Nitouche."

The first night of "Mme. Nitouche," the night on which the beautiful Walska made her début, was a gala one at the Century Theater. The notables of stage-dom were in the audience, and many millionaire patrons of the theater. The beauty made a profound impression upon these latter. A brilliant marriage was predicted as her speedy fate. In a short time it seemed as though the predictions would be verified post haste.

And now she has married the proud, obdurate bachelor, Alex Cochran. She had said:

"It is hard to find men in America who are willing to be slaves."

Has she found one willing to be a slave? Found one in Alex Cochran? Of course, the Cochran-Walska alliance 1898. He lived alone with his three children, August Jr., Raymond and Morgan, until he wed Miss Robson in St. Patrick's Cathedral in 1910.

Theirs has been an ideal life. They have been exemplars of domestic happiness. With tastes alike, they have promoted the breed of horses on stock farm and race track, they have motorized, hunted and indulged their fondness for music and art together.

William Ellis Corey was divorced by his first wife while he was president of the steel trust, but he and Maybelle Gilman, of "Mocking Bird" fame, have lived a marital life idyllic in mutual happiness in the thirteen years of their marriage. Miss Gilman promised her husband that she would never return to the stage and the promise has been kept. Her only dramatic activity has been in the staging of amateur theatricals abroad in a specially built playhouse, which Mr. Corey spent $500,000 in building for her.

Ethel Barrymore married the very wealthy Russell Colt more than ten years ago. Unlike most actresses, Miss Barrymore remained on the stage after marriage, only interrupting her engagements when maternity made retirement necessary.

It is nearly thirty years since Edith Kingdon achieved fame on the metropolitan stage. She had been an amateur player with Robert Hilliard, in Brooklyn. Then she was a sparkling success in Augustin Daly's company. Her marriage to George J. Gould has been idealistic. Her children inherit her beauty and grace and their marriages have been successful. Now a grandmother—so often that the title has long since lost its novelty—Mrs. Gould retains the charm of other days and retains her social eminence.

Names that loomed large a decade or longer ago surge across the memory as the curtains are drawn further back and the stage seems to teem with romance. There was Eleanor Pendleton and Louis M. Ream, millionaire associate of J. P. Morgan Jr.; Marie Wilson and Freddie Gebhardt; Daisy Virginia, of "The Follies," and Ford H. Keith, the wealthy Longone; Helen Moyer, also of the Ziegfeld chorus; and John H. Spear, one of the original Pittsburgh millionaires; Mabel Slocum and Harold E. Stickney, who met at Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish's lawn party, where she distributed favors and he was a distinguished guest.

In none of these, however, do we find the astonishing phenomenon that is observed in the Walska-Cochran match, the wife who has proclaimed "My husband must be my slave." The case seems to be a new one in the history of matrimony, and an interested public will watch the daily prints to see how it will turn out.

Mme. Walska's beauty won her instant fame on the stage. It also won her the obdurate and wealthy Alex Cochran, who married her in the full knowledge that she demanded of her husband that he be her slave ance is on the surface a mating of society and the footlights. The millionaire and the lady of the theater! There have been a thousand such cases. They have been written about extensively. The most famous have turned out badly and the casual remark will say: The Walska-Cochran affair is a case of theater and society. Therefore it will result in a trip to the divorce court. This, however, is more or less of a superficial view.

The unhappy marriages of this sort are precisely the ones that have gained the greatest publicity. There is no story in a happy marriage. There are many cases of unions of stage women and wealthy men that have turned out very well.

August Belmont Jr. was "America's richest widower" when he saw Eleanor Robson in "Merely Mary Ann." Mr. Belmont's first wife had died in Paris

Microbes That Have Lived A Million Years

Dr. Galippe, member of the French Academy of Science, declares that in a specimen of amber just discovered there has been found a living organism which not only showed signs of being alive when released from its prison of over a million years, but which, when cultivated, developed great activity.

Recent Excavations by Geologists Have Uncovered Specimens of Amber Containing Insects Which Exhibited Signs of Life After Being Imprisoned Since the Formation of the Earth

Recent photographs of the Sphinx and the great Chinese wall, two of the oldest works of man. Compared to the microbes which have lived on through the ages, these ancient works are in their infancy, although they show marked signs of deterioration.

Fossil insects imprisoned in amber when in a fluid condition and preserved in the Museum of Natural History, New York City appeared as completely as the warm weather in the Arctic. The scientific name was pinites succinifer, and it is from this that the resin flowed. According to an authority on the subject, Dr. George F. Black, amber is the product not of one but of several species of these extinct conifers. While there were many species, it is the irony of time that, save for the amber itself and now and again a stray bit of wood or leaf or blossom caught as the resin dropped or dripped in icicle form, no trace of this pine has been located. It has completely disappeared.

Two thousand species of insects have been found in amber. I know, from actually seeing, that there were mosquitoes, or near cousins to them, in the days long before man. But there is a danger in believing too implicitly in what you see, unless you scientifically know. For some crafty people have manufactured a concoction which much resembles amber, and into it they have put frogs and lizards and small fish in order to create discussion. There are, unfortunately, frauds in every trade.

You may ask, "Is that Frenchman of the Academy of Science a fraud when he reports life in his piece of amber?" I put to Dr. Whitlock, of the department of mineralogy at the museum, the self-same question. "I can't say that the report is not true," he replied, "but is it very likely?" The burden of proof is on Dr. Galippe. You know about the microbes in the ancient Egyptian papyri; you also are familiar with the fact that in one of the Egyptian tombs grains of corn were found which, when planted, "gave forth fruit." And we not very recently had proved to us by the biologists who accompanied Shackleton and Scott to the South Pole that living matter was extractable from the ice floes of ancient formation. So, if that can be, have we a right to say "no" even to such a report as this from Paris? Take a fly in amber. It may have been diseased at the time the resin flow caught it; parasites may have claimed it. There is a bare chance that such parasites have spanned the centuries."

There are pieces of amber with air bubbles in them; from one source I find mention of actual water bubbles which have not dried up. Even Sir Francis Bacon, scientific man in the reign of Queen Elizabeth of England, knew the secrets contained in this fossil resin. For he has written: "The Spider, Fly and Ant being tender, dissipable substances, fall into Amber, are therein buried, finding therein both a Death and Tomb, preserving them better from Corruption than a Royal Monument." So, you see, they must have been talking in Elizabeth's day in the same way of wonder that we are talking now. For, as I say, any trace of a past age throws light on darkness. Some scientist unearthed a piece of amber with a feather in it. "Ho, ho!" he exclaimed, "there must have been birds in the Tertiary Period. That's the way they piece together the parts in this riddle of the universe."

So much for what I gleaned of amber at the museum. But there was a deeper side to the incrusted life of the past which I found in the exhibits: the side which shows the value of geology in determining the history of the human race. If life, even in its lowest forms, has been discoverable in the amber owned by Dr. Galippe, the French scientist, it connects the life of about 8,000,000 years ago with the life of this year of our Lord. It is a live link in the chain of the evolution which Dr. Henry Fairfield Osborn has so carefully traced in his monumental work, "The Origin and Evolution of Life." It is a subject for the biologist to discuss, but it is so interwoven with the other "ologies" that it is an interrelated and fascinating subject to follow. There was once upon a time a lifeless earth. But from the earth, from the water and from atmosphere was life evolved, acted upon by the sun which set in motion certain physiochemical reactions. Thus were evolved bacteria, and thus began the ascent of life from unicellular forms, through invertebrates, fishes, amphibians, reptiles and mammals, to man and other vertebrates from whom he became differentiated. As this progress went on there was a corresponding change in the surface of the earth, in climatic conditions, and this resulted in more changes than befall unicellular development alone. It affected all expressions of life. That is why in every branch of natural history you get an interrelated evolution. Hence, as Sir J. W. Dawson has written: "By collecting the fossil remains embedded in the several layers (of earth) and placing them in chronological order we obtain in like manner histories of animals and plant life parallel to the physical changes indicated by the beds themselves." Schliemann, as an archaeologist, has dug through successive layers of débris in the same manner, separating débris of the past as one cuts through rock for geologic evidence.

Strange to say, amber occupies in its history a peculiarly delicate place, emanating from plant life and passing into mineral life. Coal is likewise a transitional phenomenon living under two flags, so to speak. But the relation of amber to a definite tree, now extinct and once found in definite localities, places the emphasis more on the plant side than on the mineral. Stray signs of amber are to be found in America, but I would not put the United States on the amber map. On the other hand, there are vast opportunities of studying fossil insects and plants of other geologic periods right in this country; for instance, in Colorado, where Miocene evidences of natural history are plentiful.

Altogether, this is a fascinating topic, made imminent by the Galippe announcement from across seas. For if it is so we then can set forth on the track of ancient life to find and develop it, if it is fit to develop under present geologic conditions. My visit to the museum brought two contrasts in close juxtaposition. In order to reach my amber specimens I had to pass through the hall of the mammoths, animals and insects as evidences of years gone by, in their large and small ways. But I forgot the mastodons and dinosaurs as I looked at the traceries of insects in the amber. And I recalled Mercutio's famous lines in Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet": "Oh, then, I see Queen Mab hath been with you."

She is the fairies' midwife, and she comes In shape no bigger than an agate-stone On the forefinger of an alderman, Drawn with a team of little atomies Athwart men's noses as they lie asleep; Her wagon-spokes made of long spinners' legs;

The cover, of the wings of grasshoppers;

Her traces, of the smallest spider's web;

Over a million years ago these gnats, spiders and mosquitoes buzzed and sang in Tertiary atmosphere and heard Tertiary chatter, as we hear man chatter now. Think of that, you smokers biting on your amber stem!

A TRAGEDY OF THE DESERT

Adjudant Bernard.

Stranger and More Gripping Than Fiction Is This Tale of a French Army Plane Wrecked Upon the Sands of Sahara--Its Three Occupants Battle Thirst, Hunger and Desolation for Twenty-Four Days.

HERE is a most extraordinary story of the desert, a story so gripping in its intensity that it needs no word-painting or rhetoric. The simple facts, as told by a young soldier in his official report on the death of his General are more eloquent than novelist could make them. Briefly, this is what happened: Two French army airplanes started at 7:30 A. M. from the oasis of Tamanrasset, an advanced post in the Sahara, to fly to Timbuctoo. In one was Commandant Vuillemain, in the other were Gen. Lapperine, Adjudant Bernard and Marcel Vaslin, a young aviator mechanic who had responded at the last moment to a call for a volunteer. The General sat on Vaslin's knees, while Bernard piloted the machine. The Touaregs, led by their Grand Chief Moussaag Amastane, gave them a great send-off. Vuillemain's machine reached Timbuctoo in safety, but for twenty-four days nothing was heard of the other and its passengers. It was not until March 14 that Bernard and Vaslin were found by accident, at death's door, from hunger, thirst and heat, alone in the desert beside the wreck of their airplane and near the shallow grave in which they had buried the General. Vaslin's official report is here translated from L'Illustration, very slightly abridged.

By MARCEL VASLIN.

FOR several minutes we fly over Tamanrasset and the Hoggar region. Then we fly off to the south-south-west, following as well as possible the camel route toward Tin Rharo. After about twelve miles the trail is no longer visible, so we follow valley that seems to lead in the right direction. Commandant Vuillemain leads, but at a lower altitude. Adjudant Bernard follows, as had been agreed.

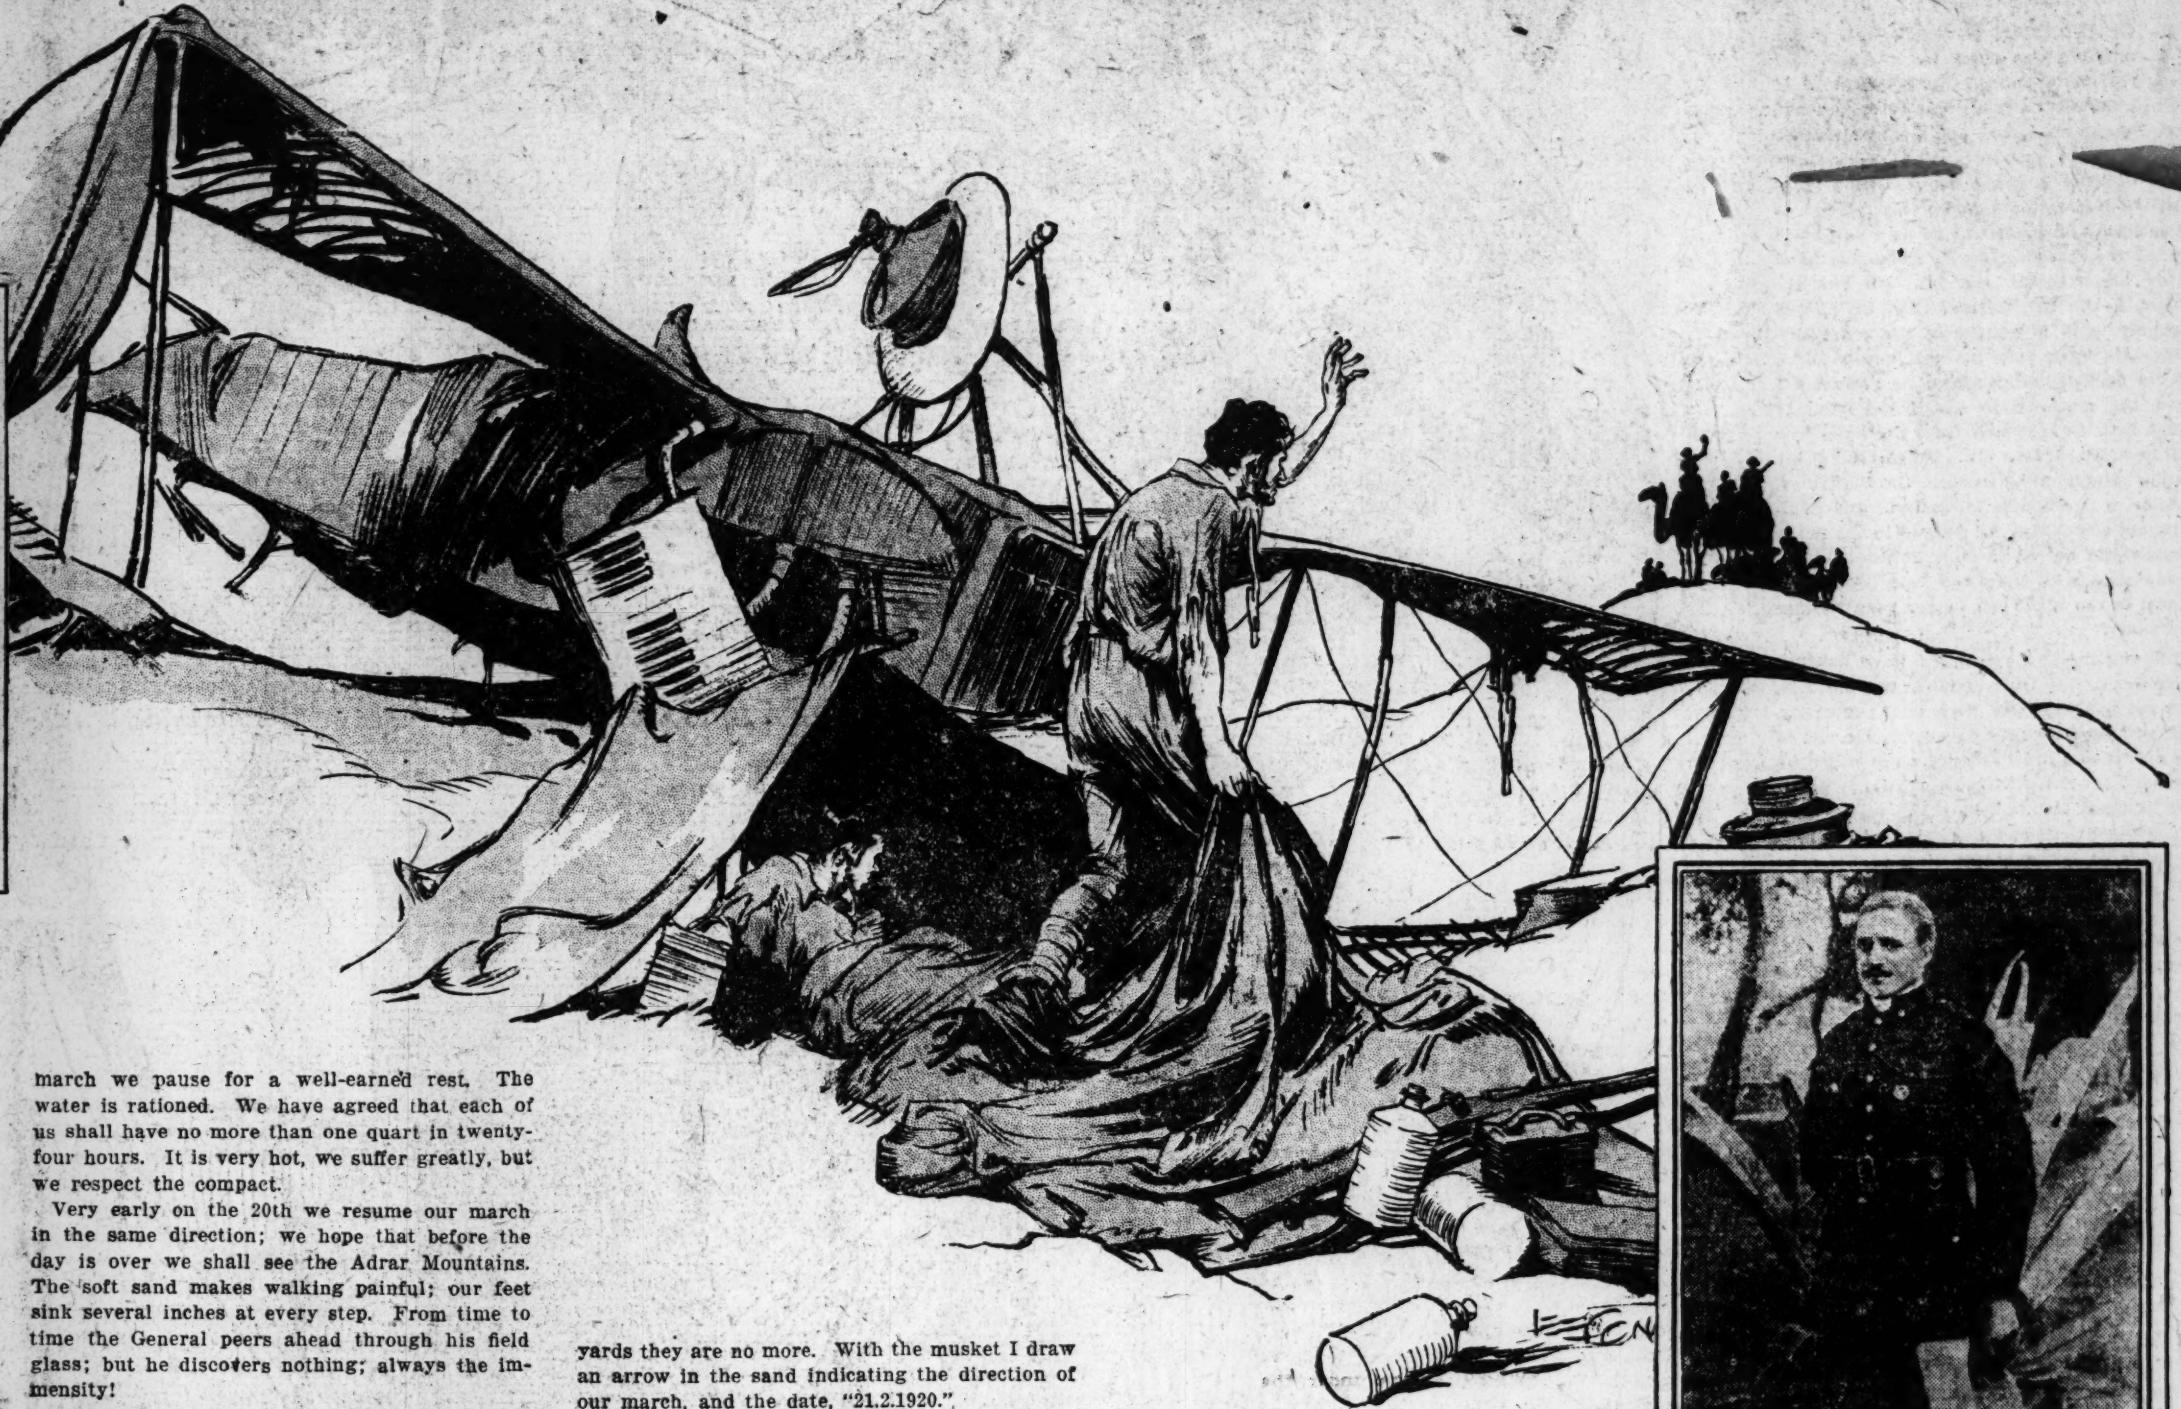

As Tin Zacouaten is not in sight at 11:30, and we have gas for only twenty minutes more of flight, we decided to send out a wireless signal of distress and to make a landing. The ground is a vast plane, very soft, and there are sand dunes to the north. At more than 6,000 feet altitude the wind is ahead; Bernard steers to the south and descends. When not more than 75 feet above the ground a sudden puff of wind turns the machine on its left wing, and, to make matters worse, the surface wind is from the north, which makes us capsize violently.

The General, not being tied, is caught between me and the windshield and wounded; his left collar bone is broken, one side is crushed, and he feels internal contusions. Bernard crawls out unscathed from under the machine; as for me, my head is in the sand, but I get out only slightly bruised.

It is about noon and as the temperature is about 113 deg. Fahrenheit, we lie down in the shade of the wings of the overturned airplane.

In the morning (Feb. 12), before dawn, the General decides that we must start in a north-westerly direction in the hope of finding the Adrar Mountains. So we gather up what is necessary for the march.

We are off at daybreak. The General carries his binoculars and portfolio and walks with difficulty. Bernard and I carry the food, water, etc., which make quite a load. After five hours of March we pause for a well-earned rest. The water is rationed. We have agreed that each of us shall have no more than one quart in twenty-four hours. It is very hot, we suffer greatly, but we respect the compact.

Very early on the 20th we resume our march in the same direction; we hope that before the day is over we shall see the Adrar Mountains. The soft sand makes walking painful; our feet sink several inches at every step. From time to time the General peers ahead through his field glass; but he discovers nothing; always the immensity!

At sunset we reach a little hill, when we had hoped to see the longed-for mountains, but there is nothing but a region of sand dunes stretching many miles ahead. Gen. Lapperine tries by consulting his map to find out just where we are. We watch him closely and read in his face that we are lost. He says we shall return to-morrow morning to our airplane and it is important that we reach it quickly.

On Feb. 21 at the usual hour we retrace our steps in the direction of the airplane we had left two days ago. The General is very feeble. We make brief marches of one hour. At 10 o'clock we come across the footprints of camels and believe yards they are no more. With the musket I draw an arrow in the sand indicating the direction of our march, and the date, "21.2.1920."

The General writes a note, "We are marching toward our airplane, which is about twelve miles from here," and signs his name in Targui and Arabic characters.

At 11 o'clock the usual halt. Our throats are so dry we cannot eat, so we wait till evening. We start again at 4 and walk till 7, when we can go no further, as we cannot see our footprints.

This evening the General's condition is very disquieting; he could scarcely reach here and complains constantly of pains in his back.

On the 22d, about 4 A. M., we have difficulty in rising; the General cannot get up by himself, so we help him and are off. We rest every half hour. We see the airplane and are happy, although we know that safety does not await us there. It seems near, but we walk a long time. When 400 yards away our chief can go no further.

"My lads," he says, "go ahead and arrange your affairs; you can come back for me later. But Bernard supports him and at 9:30 we reach our goal. It has not moved; the upper planes, which are on the ground, are already buried in sand. We look to see if the radiator has leaked and are happy to find that it is still nearly full.

On the 23d nothing new. On the 24th I fire

On the 6th we think of burying him, but we still hope to be found. The heat is greater than ever. We have rations of water for six days and food for four. Bernard and I agree to drink 2 1/2 quarts of water a day. Bernard has a terrible thirst, but he will not touch his ration of water; instead he breaks the compass and drinks the liquid therein. This evening our dinner is one biscuit apiece. In the night we shiver and in the morning we are stiff with cold. At sunset we go to a rut cut by a wheel of the airplane in landing and by digging with our hands enlarge it to make a hole in which our great chief may rest. When we have buried him we place a wheel over him and fix a kepi on top.

On the 10th we do not move; we spend the day lying searching the horizon with our eyes; nothing--always nothing. We have nothing more to eat. Bernard absorbs some glycerine out of the General's valise; I eat some toothpaste, which gives a terrible thirst. We also devore some tablets of jubol (a medicine).

On the 12th Bernard proposes to me that we end it. I do my best to raise his morale; but he points out that if we do not forestall death, our end will be terrible--to which I agree. At 9 P. M., by the light of a pocket electric lamp, he writes these words: "This evening, March 12, at 9 o'clock, having no more food or water, we give ourselves voluntarily to death, failing to understand why in 23 days we have not been found, if we have been sought for. Goodbye to this world." I, however, persuade him to give up his idea, and on the morning of the 13th we are still of this world. In the evening the idea of suicide returns more impetuously than ever to Bernard. We drink our last quart of water. It is decided. Bernard takes two safety razor blades from the valise. Each of us takes one and we place before us two recipients into which we shall let our blood flow, so that we can drink it and thus assuage our thirst a last time before dying.

Bernard, more courageous than I, begins first. With the razor blade he cuts a deep gash in the artery of his left wrist. I have already begun to cut myself also, when I notice that Bernard's blood does not flow, so I stop. My poor comrade is very angry. He throws the blade far away, and I do the same.

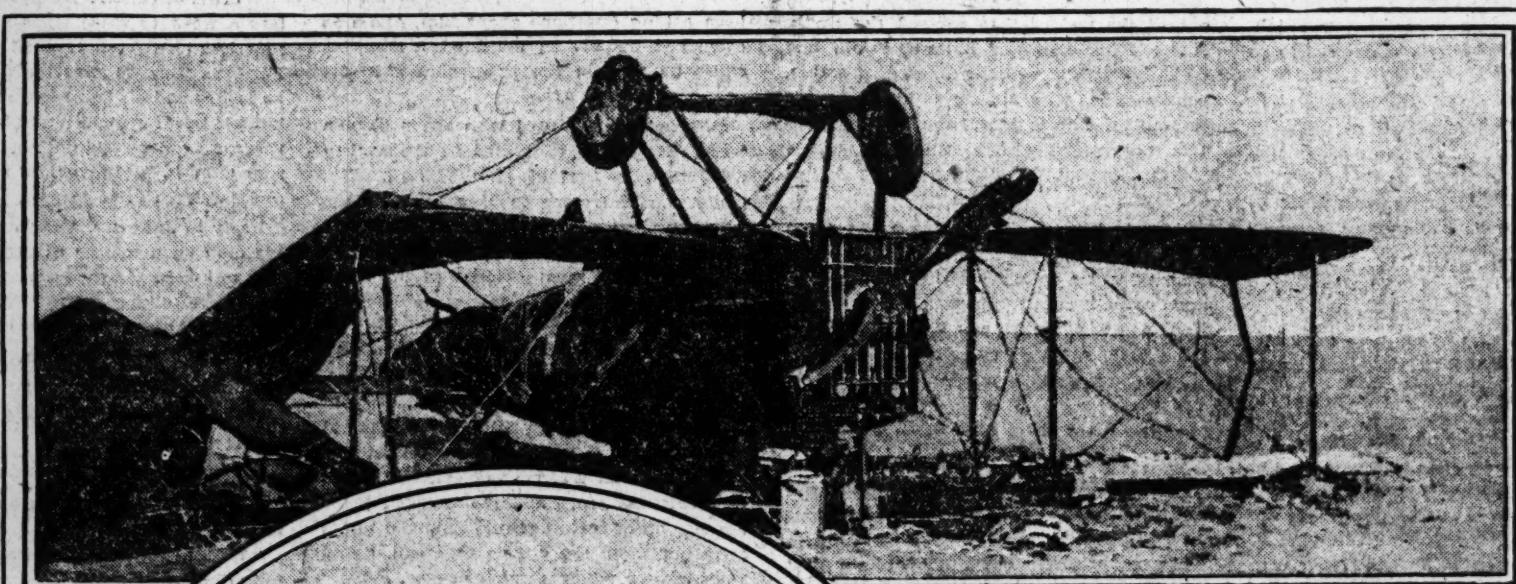

On the 14th early a heavy sandstorm rises. Bernard says: "Are we ready? We will end it at noon. I have still some hope."

Scarcely an hour elapses when I hear the bray of a camel. I don't know what extraordinary strength comes to me, but I throw off the blanket, grab the carbine and fire the last three cartridges into the air.

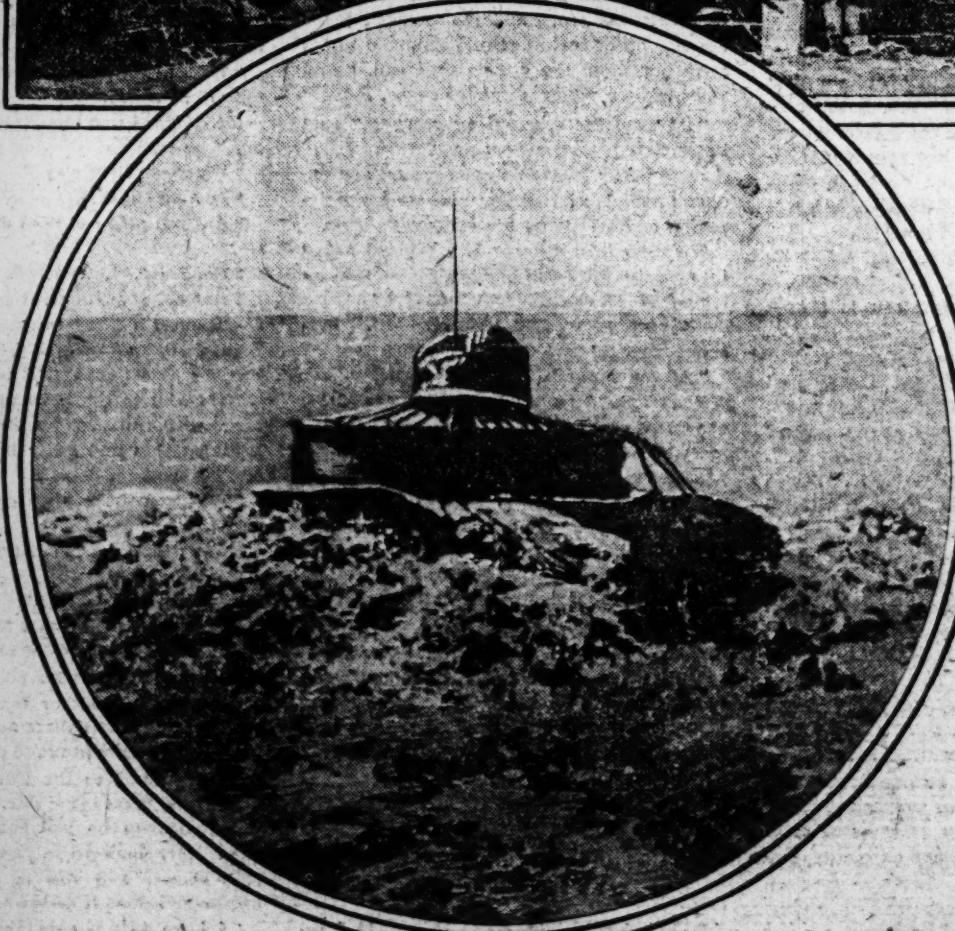

We have been heard and we are saved.

A few minutes later we see Lieut. Pruvost, galloping up with Quartermaster Sergt. Moncassin and Brigadier Delplanque. They at once put up a tent and lavish attention upon us.

The following day, March 15, Lieut. Pruvost explained that we had been found accidentally, for he had not come out looking for us. He was on his way to Agades for supplies, and he supposed that we had been found ten days earlier. A report to this effect having been current at Tamanrasset.

WITH THE HELP OF THE DUKE

BY CLARENCE BUDINGTON KELLAND

Peter McGee, Private Secretary, Takes a Little Flyer in Love and Frenzied Finance.

A GENTLEMAN of middle age, if one might judge from his carriage and movements, stood on the platform of the railroad station in a small Vermont town. The evening was cold and he was muffled to the eyes by overcoat collar and neckerchief. In the growing darkness one gathered the impression that he was dressed as a gentleman of means should be. He turned toward the station door, thrusting his hand inside his overcoat and into his trousers pocket as he did so, and then he paused suddenly, with a gesture of perturbed surprise. He flung open his coat and explored all his pockets, after which he rushed out upon the platform to see if the carriage which had brought him from the hotel was still in sight. It was not. He glanced at his watch. His train was due in three minutes.

After a moment's hesitation, and with apparent reluctance, he stepped to the ticket window and peered through at the agent, a young man with fiery red hair which had flamed in the world not longer than twenty-five years.

"Young man," he said, "I have lost my pocketbook. My train is due in two minutes. I've got to be in New York in the morning. Can you lend me fifty dollars?" He felt of his cravat and drew from it a pin which he extended toward the agent. "This is worth two hundred dollars," he said.

The red haired agent scowled and craned his neck to get a better view of the man who made this extraordinary request.

"Come inside," he said, motioning toward a communicating door.

When the stranger was inside the office the youthful agent removed the shade from his lamp. "Would you mind taking off your hat and turning down your collar?"

The stranger hesitated a second, but complied. The young man studied his features briefly and walked over to a safe in the corner, from which he took an envelope bearing his own name, and drew from it five ten dollar bills.

"Put your pin back in your tie," he said, and handed the currency to the stranger.

The older man appeared nonplussed, but presently seemed to sense an explanation.

"O, you recognize me?"

"Never saw you in my life," said the agent, who was busily stamping a ticket for the stranger.

"Then why did you want to look at my face, and why do you lend me this money without the security I offered?"

"Knew I didn't need security after I got a look at you. Better hustle. Train just whistled. Here's my name and address on this slip, so you'll know where to return the money. Peter McGee is the name. . . . There she comes. Stops only a minute."

"Thank you, young man." The gentleman eyed Peter a moment as one gazes at a strange and unexpected phenomenon. "Good night."

Three days later Peter McGee received a letter containing a check for sixty dollars. He cashed it, replaced fifty in his envelope in the safe, and returned the extra ten to the sender, whose name appeared to be Amos Willard. Peter did not recall having heard the name before. It was associated with nothing in his mind, and he promptly forgot the incident. It was a small courtesy, and Peter was almost as ready to perform small courtesies for anybody who happened along as he was to take off his coat and skin his able knuckles against their jaws in case the circumstances seemed to require such treatment.

A week afterward, when the whole matter had passed from his mind, he received a telegram which requested him to come to New York on a certain date, all expenses paid, to discuss a business proposition. It was signed Amos Willard.

Peter thought it over, and his thoughts ran something after this fashion: "I'm tired of this town and this job. There's nothing in it. I've got to quit some time if I ever expect to get anywhere. New York is a good place to get somewhere in. There's nobody dependent on me, so I can't hurt anybody myself. Guess I'll take a look."

Whereupon he resigned his position, pocketed his savings, which amounted to some four hundred odd dollars, and went to New York. He checked his bag in the parcel room and inquired his way to the address on lower Broadway which Amos Willard had given him, but he did not inquire of anybody who Amos Willard was.

The office he sought was on the fourteenth floor of a bigger building than Peter had ever been in before that moment, and the office itself was more sumptuous. It reminded Peter of books he had read.

"I want to see Mr. Willard," he said to a young woman behind a desk.

"Have you an appointment?"

"Yes."

"At what hour?"

"Right now," said Peter. He had come all the way from Vermont to see this man, at this man's request, and he was not going to be kept waiting.

"Your name?"

"Peter McGee."

"One moment, please."

She returned presently. "Mr. Willard will see you at ten o'clock tomorrow morning," she said.

Peter's red hair bristled. "Will you say to Mr. Willard that I am here at his request. I don't know him nor what he wants, except that he seems to want to see me. I don't know how badly he wants to see me, but it's got to be badly enough to see me now. Please tell him that."

"I—why, I've never delivered such a message to Mr. Willard."

"You can never do a thing the first time but once," said Peter; and the young woman, impressed with the idea that Peter must be a very important individual indeed to take such a tone with her employer, returned to Mr. Willard and delivered an expurgated version of the message. Mr. Willard smiled delightedly. "Show the young man in," he said.

As Peter came in Mr. Willard extended his hand. "I'm glad to see you, young man. Sit down. . . . Would you mind telling me just what reasoning urged you to do as I asked in my telegram?"

"You said you wanted to discuss a business proposition with me. That meant I could be valuable to you in some way. If I could be valuable to you it would be profitable to me. . . . At any rate, I stood to lose nothing, because I was going to throw up my job at home."

"You'd looked me up, of course."

"No. Didn't need to. I'd seen you."

"But you know who I am?"

"I don't even know what your business is; but I knew it was a good one or you wouldn't be in it."

"Um. . . . You lend me a perfect stranger, fifty dollars. You give up a job and come to New York at my request. . . . And all on the strength of having seen my face once for a few seconds. Young man, I'll say you are willing to back your own judgment. That's the kind of young man I'm looking for. . . . What can you do?"

"Stenographer. Telegraph operator. Understand railroading from the point of view of a small station. Bookkeeping. Two years in the state university."

"What have you been earning?"

"Eighty-three thirty-three a month."

"My private secretary has gone to take charge of my office in London. It was a promotion. The place is vacant and I'm offering it to you."

"I take it."

Mr. Willard smiled again. "Without asking about the salary?"

Peter shrugged his shoulders.

"The salary will be seventy-five dollars a week. When will you be ready to come to work?"

"I'm at work now," said Peter, and he hung his hat upon a hook. . . .

This is the true story of the manner in which Peter McGee became associated with Amos Willard. Fantastic and absurd rumors have been set afloat by gossiping tongues to account for the appearance of this red headed young man in the affairs of one of the first financiers of his day. All who read this are in a position to deny them authoritatively.

If Peter was unaware of the identity and importance of Amos Willard when he arrived in New York, he did not long remain so. He soon discovered that very big men indeed were humble in Willard's presence, not only American business men, but others from far off places where wealth was dug from the earth or was gleaned from the vegetation of the earth or was dipped up out of the waters that covered the earth. . . . Peter saw and enjoyed it all, and while he was sometimes amazed, it was a point of pride with him never to display his amazement, and to accept the most remarkable occurrences with a calm and matter-of-fact air that tickled the humor of his employer.

Peter had been private secretary to Amos Willard some three months before that event occurred which quite revolutionized his ambitions and furnished him with a definite objective in life. Peter judged the occurrence to be about nineteen years old; as a matter of fact she was much older—she was twenty.

She entered the private door and stared at Peter's red hair and said: "Where's father?"

"Thank you," said Peter, and then he blushed a very little and looked confused.

"I beg your pardon?"

Manifestly Peter could not explain that he had said "Thank you" involuntarily to nature or the universe, or the gods-of-things-as-they-are because they had shown him exactly what he wanted, so he said: "Mr. Willard is away for the afternoon—but I am here."

"What I wanted was a parent," said Miss Willard.

"A parent's private secretary is almost the same thing."

"But I wanted a hundred dollars."

"One moment," said Peter. He stepped downstairs to the bank, cashed his own check for the amount, and grumbled at the elevator for mounting so slowly.

"Thank you," said Miss Willard. "You're a much more efficient secretary than father's last one. He was afraid to give me money if father wasn't here."

"A good private secretary should know what his employer would do—and then do it."

"How do you know father would give me hundred dollars?"

"Because," said Peter, "anybody would have to give you anything you asked for."

Now, if Peter had thought up that speech, or had offered it with an air of gallantry, he would certainly have been snubbed. But he said it as one making an observation upon the obvious, and with such an air of sincerity that he did not seem at all forward or impudent, and Miss Willard smiled and examined his red hair again as she tucked the bills away in her purse.

"Thank you," she said . . . and was gone.

The next time she came Miss Willard called him Mr. McGee, so he knew she had been asking questions about him, and was overjoyed, but his joy did not last long, because he read in the paper that she was going to marry a duke.

Peter was acquainted with the nobleman whose name was connected in the society columns with that of Miss Willard. The gentleman had come to New York as the representative of the De Groot Diamond Mines, Incorporated, and it was his mission to dispose of a great amount of the stock of this company to the American public. He had come, first of all, to Mr. Willard, who had declined to have anything to do with the business, but who, owing to certain letters of introduction carried by the Duke of Tenstair, had shown him certain social courtesies, of which the duke had taken able advantage. Mr. Willard, who often—perhaps—acted like a duke, was a frugal young man.

He arrived in New York with a few hundred dollars. He had added fifty dollars a week to these since his arrival, and now had on deposit upward of a thousand.

For days after his interview with Mr. Willard he looked at his bank book and demanded of himself how he could multiply his fortune a thousand times—and did not find a satisfactory answer. However, he was determined and far from faint-hearted.

Early in June Mr. Willard called Peter to his club on a matter of business and kept him to lunch. At the next table four gentlemen were talking golf. "We've got to add another eighteen holes," said one of them.

"Right off," said another.

"I suppose we could buy the Watkins farm adjoining our present property."

"At a price."

"Better see about it right away, then."

That was all Peter heard, but it set his mind to work.

"Who are those gentlemen at the next table?" he asked.

Mr. Willard told him. "Golf cranks—every one," he said.

It was after Miss Willard's second appearance in the office that Peter wrote his resignation and laid it on his employer's desk.

"What's this, Peter?" Mr. Willard asked in surprise. "Somebody hiring you away from me? Dissatisfied? What is it?"

"Perfectly satisfied, Mr. Willard. Personal matter."

"As for instance?"

Peter drew a long breath and wriggled his shoulders as he had been seen to do on numerous occasions before embarking upon physical conflict.

"I have seen Miss Willard twice," he said. "She is exactly what I want most in the world. I'm going to try to get her. You wouldn't allow me, of course, so I resign. Only square thing to do."

Mr. Willard did not laugh, nor, on the contrary, did he scowl. He seemed rather sorry.

"Peter," he said, "I'm afraid you're going to burn your fingers. . . . What would you do with my daughter if you got her? Depend on the old man for the wherewithal?"

Peter shook his head.

"What then? Think it's fair to ask her to live on seventy-five a week, or ten thousand a year? She couldn't do it. I wouldn't let her. Also I won't support a son-in-law."

Peter shook his head.

"Don't blame you, sir. . . . If I remember, you were earning eighteen dollars a week at my age. You told me that."

"Yes."

"Well, sir?"

"At what figure, young man?"

"Seventeen hundred and fifty dollars an acre."

"Robbery."

Peter shrugged his shoulders. "I know where I can dispose of it for exhibition purposes," he said. "But I thought it was only fair to give you first chance."

"Give you twelve hundred and fifty."

"I have one price. That is the last word I have an hour to spare, and can give you that long to decide."

Mr. Rankin started at Peter as if he were of half a mind to have him shown vigorously off the premises. He compromised, however, by leading him into the lounge, giving him a cigar, and excusing himself to talk to his fellow governors. Peter waited in a frame of mind. Well within the hour five gentlemen returned and argued with Peter eloquently, but their eloquence was futile. His price remained where he had set it, and they capitulated. At 8 o'clock he left that place with a check in his pocket for one hundred and one thousand dollars. As he rode toward the station there was one pleasant thought in his mind, namely, "Now I can decently make a hundred thousand dollars' worth of love to Dorcas Willard."

Fortune favored Peter. Mr. Willard sprained his ankle and was confined to his Long Island home. For two weeks Peter became an inmate of the house, occupied a few hours each day by his secretarial duties, but at liberty for the remaining hours to make a hundred thousand dollars' worth of love. He did so with characteristic thoroughness—and in the process came to dislike the Duke of Tenstair thoroughly, because the duke was very much in the way.

"But remember," he said to himself many times, "that a hundred thousand is a devil of a ways from being a million."

Because the duke was his principal rival Peter studied the man from all angles and perspectives. As has been indicated, Peter did not believe the duke to be a good risk unless supported by ample security. In short, he suspected the duke. He believed the duke was incapable of affection, and would cheerfully have substituted any other girl for Dorcas Willard if the financial advantages were equal or superior. What Dorcas thought about the duke he could not determine for a long time—not until he found her crying in the sunken garden one afternoon. It was a very good place to cry, and a splendid place to be comforted. Peter rather forgot to limit himself to a hundred thousand dollars' worth of attention to Dorcas, with the satisfactory, but unexpected result, that she wept on his shoulder.

"I don't want to marry him. . . . He's old, and he's a stick, and I don't want to live in England. . . . and . . . ."

"Then kick him out," said Peter elegantly.

"It's auntie. She's she's just shoved him down my throat. . . . I—oh, I don't know what to do. Some day she'll argue me into it, and then my life will be all smashed to smithereens. . . . I—oh, I like you lots better than him."

"So do I," said Peter.

Dorcas looked up suddenly. "I know," she said. "I could marry you—just as easy, Peter. I—I like you a lot. That's what I'll do. I'll—I'll sleep with you, and then they can't make me marry anybody else."

"You bet they couldn't," said Peter.

"Come on. . . . Now," said Dorcas.

Peter shook his head.

Dorcas looked puzzled, then a little frightened, then aghast. "Don't you love me, Peter McGee?" she demanded. "You've acted like it."

"I do," said Peter, "but I haven't acted like it but a hundred thousand dollars' worth. I can't. That's all I've got. I—I'm after the million, and the minute I get it we'll

A Day With a Georgia Poet

AN APPRECIATION OF ROBERT LOVEMAN, OF DALTON, WRITTEN ESPECIALLY FOR THIS CONSTITUTION

By Richard Johnson Braxley

"My dear boy, come on, and bring your bathing suit, for I dip every morning, or afternoon, and the pool is fine" was the manner in which Robert Loveman, distinguished poet, wholesome philosopher, and Georgian, invited me to visit him last July in his home in Dalton, Ga.

I did not hesitate in responding to this cordial invitation. A letter was hurried off, and a day set. And, when that particular day arrived I went. But there were so many other things to interest us we failed to take

I cannot remember just when I first became interested in Mr. Loveman, but I believe it was when I was a high school boy, and my father informed me that Georgia had two excellently reputed writers crowded into one little town in the northern part of the state—a novelist, Will N. Harben, whose stories the house of Harper & Bros. was bringing out from year to year, and a poet, Robert Loveman, whose place in "Who's Who" had long been established and whose little volumes of superb lyrics were being brought out at intervals by J. B. Lippincott Company, of Philadelphia.

Mr. Harben was a much older man than Mr. Loveman, and a few years ago laid down his pen in death. But Mr. Loveman, still in his prime, lives today in the same quaint and interesting place, where he is not without honor, even in his own town.

It was a quiet morning hour, crowned with a blaze of rich sunlight, when I arrived, and Mr. Loveman's greeting was as cordial as the sun-shine. He appeared even boyish in his exuberance.

I had parked my car in the street in front of Mr. Loveman's beautiful home, and was contemplating the long stretch of gravel walk that leads to his doorstep when Mr. Loveman himself hurried out to insist upon my driving right up into the yard. I with him was by no means scanty. Then there were letters from Edmund Clarence Stedman, William Deas Howells, James Whitcomb Riley, Ella Wheeler Wilcox, Robert Bridges, Madison Cawein and many others.

Indeed, it was a very large scrapbook and newspaper clippings about

Mr. Loveman and his work from all parts of the country, magazine articles, and so forth, graced many pages.

But I became conscious of the fact that most all of his recognition had come from without the borders of his home state.

Some years ago Mr. Loveman brought out a volume, "Songs From a Georgia Garden." So I requested him to show me his garden. And he did.

But I found that most of Mr. Loveman's garden consisted of high, healthy corn, yes, rows on rows of mighty stalks of it, with beans running up the stalks.

"A lady once remarked that my hands were not much like those of a poet," said Mr. Loveman, as he explained. "When I'm tired of being
